THE EXCHANGE OF NEGRO SOLDIERS.

By last night's mail we received full files of the Richmond papers to the 22d, from which we take the following interesting extracts:

AVERILL'S GREAT RAID.

LYNCHBURGH, Saturday, Dec. 19.

We have but little additional with reference to the Salem raiders. On Tuesday night they surprised and fired into the camp of Capt. WHITE, on Catawba Creek, and captured 17 men and about 100 horses, which were being recuperated. Farmers, who arrived at Bonsack's this evening, say that the enemy were on this side of Craig's creek, eighteen miles from Salem, at noon yesterday. Their camp was visible from the mountains. Craig's Creek was raising rapid y yesterday, and impossible to ford, which prevents the enemy's further retreat on the Newcastle road.

SECOND DISPATCH.

LYNCHBURGH, Saturday, Dec. 19.

Passengers this evening report that the enemy, finding Craig's creek past fording, changed their course up the Catawba, and camped on Thursday night, ten miles below Montgomery White Sulphur Springs. Their object in taking this route is to strike the Salt Pond road, leading towards the Kanawha Valley. Their capture is confidently expected. Reported skirmishing yesterday at Blacksburgh.

THIRD DISPATCH.

LYNCHBURGH, Sunday, Dec. 20.

A special correspondent of the Virginian, dated Salem, Dec. 18, says that on Wednesday morning the enemy's advance guard charged up Main-street, the main body following soon after, with pistols drawn, ready to open fire upon the citizens who crowded the street. They broke open the Post-office, cut the telegraph wires, and then proceeded to the depot, which was crowded with ladies and gentlemen awaiting the train. They broke open trunks, destroyed their contents, and set fire to the building. They formed a line of battle and planted a battery of eight pieces of artillery on a hill, to bear on the expected train. When the train came in sight they fired eight shots at it, but it retired without damage. They opened many stores, carried off or destroyed all the goods, burned several barns, one containing a large lot of tallow and oil, and destroyed a quantity of grain. They were piloted by a man named HALL, who was ordnance officer at this post for Gen. JENKINS last Spring, but deserted soon after and went over to the enemy. The enemy remained here till 5 o'clock this evening. Hearing that FITZHUGH LEE and IMBODEN were in pursuit, they left, camping about six miles from town that night. They shot about fifty horses before they left camp, as they had more than they could get along with. Supposing they could not cross Craig's Creek, the way they came, they changed their course, going in the direction of Fincastle. The enemy represented that they had twelve thousand men, but that their force had been divided, and a portion gone in another direction. Among the prisoners captured was Capt. PORTEAUX, Assistant Quartermaster of the post. Many servants went off with them.

THE YANKEE RAID.

From the Richmond Examiner, Dec. 19.

AVERILL'S raid in Southwestern Virginia is likely to prove an interesting affair. Our latest from him is, that he retreated from Salem on Thursday evening, but reappeared there yesterday morning under circumstances that led to the belief that h's route to Kanawha had been stopped by our forces. We are in possession of some facts relative to the movements of our men, which it is not thought advisable to publish just now. It is believed that AVERILL will attempt to get to Danville and liberate the Yankee prisoners confined there.

From the Richmond Examiner, Dec. 22.

If AVERILL is allowed to escape, the cavalry of Virginia had better be reorganized without loss of time. Our military authorities had abundant notice of this raid to have perfected the most elaborate plans. They were informed by Gen. SAM. JONES that AVERILL was advancing on Lewisburgh, with the design, he thought, of tapping the Virginia and Tennessee railroad. This was a week before he reached Salem, in the neighborhood of which town he remained several days. We say nothing of the natural obstacles against which three thousand men would have to contend in making a raid of three hundred miles through a mountainous and thinly-settled country. It would be impossible for them to carry their subsistence with them, and it would appear equally impossible for them to draw it from such a country, which, too, has been very effectually gleaned by Confederate Commissaries and Quarter-masters.

It is proper to mention, in this connexion, that it has, for several days, been known here that another body of Yankee cavalry, three thousand strong, were advancing up the valley toward Staunton, with a design, in was supposed, of creating a diversion which might facilitate AVERILL's escape. We have no fears but that this party will be well met and taken care of.

During their stay at Salem, they destroyed three car-loads of commissary and a large quantity of quartermaster stores, including a considerable amount of leather and a great quantity of produce belonging to merchants of Lynchburgh, stored in the depot, which was also destroyed.

PITZER's large flour mill, MCCLANAHAN's store, and three small buildings were burned, also seventy five Government wagons. THOMAS CHAPMAN, a citizen, was killed; the prisoners in the jail liberated, among whom were a few Yankee prisoners.

A number of citizens, and some furloughed and wounded soldiers were taken prisoners, but the citizens have returned. A number of negroes were carried off. It is said the enemy's force did not exceed fifteen hundred. Reports of their returning to Salem are conflicting.

EAST TENNESSEE.

BRISTOL, Monday, Dec. 21.

Officers from the front state that our forces are moving forward in the direction of Knoxville. The country between Bean's Station and Morristown has been cleared of the enemy. Only three hundred prisoners were captured in the engagement at Bean's Station, as the men stopped to pillage the wagon train, which was loaded with coffee, sugar, canvassed hams and shoes. But for this, many more might have been captured.

Reports from below state that IMBODEN and ECHOLS have surrounded the Salem raiders, and that the entire party will, probably, be captured. The enemy have burned their wagons and destroyed their artillery, to prevent their falling into our hands. The railroad between this point and Lynchburgh will be in running order by Saturday.

FROM GEORGIA.

DALTON, Wednesday, Dec. 16.

The enemys' future plans are involved in mystery. They have had but few men at work on bridges, and have completed but one railroad bridge over the Tennessee at Bridgeport. All quiet in front.

AFFAIRS IN VIRGINIA.

ORANGE COURT-HOUSE, Thursday, Dec. 17.

A Lieutenant and five privates were captured on the Rappannock River, on Monday night. They deny that MEADE has been, or will be superceded.

Four corps of the enemy's infantry and all of his cavalry are busy preparing Winter quarters in Culpepper County, and corduroying the roads. One corps of his infantry, and most of his artillery, have gone behind the Rappahannock River to guard the line of railroad and to Winter.

Heavy rain falling. Roads bad.

The Richmond Examiner, of the 14th remarks:

"A private letter from an officer of the army of Northern Virginia informs us that all quiet there; that the troops have a plenty to eat, rather deficient in shoes and blankets, but are full of fight as ever.

Gen. LONGSTREET also reports the enemy are still falling back from Chattanooga to North Georgia, and thinks they will soon abandon East Tennessee.

We regret we have nothing satisfactory from AVERILL and his raiding party. Some telegrams concerning will be found in another column. Strong hopes are entertained that, by whatever route he attempts to escape, he will find a lion in his path.

"Miss MARY JANE JOHNSON," says the Richmond Examiner, "who was detected on Belle Isle, among the Yankee prisoners, dressed according to soldier regulations, has had them substituted at the Castle for a frock, petticoat and crinoline, and looked as though she was again clothed in her right apparel as well as her right mind."

MR. JOHN MITCHELL, for some time engaged with the Richmond Enquirer, has withdrawn from his late connection with the daily press.

THE TRIAL OF MRS. PATTERSON ALLAN.

The Richmond Enquirer of the 21st devotes two columns to a report of the proceedings in the examination of MRS. PATTERSON ALLAN, charged with carrying on a treasonable correspondence with persons at the North. The hearing was before Commissioner WATSON, on the 19th inst. The lady was brought into Court promptly at 11 o'clock. As on previous days, she was attended by her husband. She wore a black alpaca dsess, black merino shawl, and dark bonnet. She remained closely vailed during the whole examination.

The case caused great excitement at Richmond, and Gen. WINDER, Mrs. HOOE and other well-known rebels are witnesses for the prosecution. After taking their testimony the case was postponed to the 12th proximo.

As a matter of interest, we annex the following warrant of arrest, issued by Gen. WINDER. We also publish below, the letter marked "A," claimed by the rebels to have been addressed to Rev. MORGAN DIX, of New-York, which led to her arrest:

WARRANT OF ARREST.

Confederate States of America, Eastern District of Virginia, at the City of Richmond, to wit:

On this day, 8th of December, 1863, personally appeared before the undersigned, a Confederate States Commissioner in and for the District aforesaid, Gen. JOHN H. WINDER of the said city, who, being duly sworn, saith upon his oath that he believes that the papers shown to him, marked A, B and C, are in the handwriting of Miss CAROLINE ALLAN, the wife of PATTERSON ALLAN, which papers were intercepted; by which act this affiant believes that the said MARY CAROLINE ALLAN is chargeable with treason in adhering to the enemies of the Confederate States, in giving them aid and comfort by writing and sending or attempting to send, a letter of advice and intelligence to the enemy aforesaid, sometime during the month of June, 1863. He, the said J. H. WINDER, prays that the said MARY CAROLINE ALLAN be apprehended and held to answer the said complaint, and dealt with as the law may require.

J. H. WINDER, Brig.-Gen. C. S. A.

LETTER FROM SANTA TRINITA TO CARO SIGNORE.

RICHMOND, Thursday, June 8, 1863.

CARO SIGNORE: I humbly entreat you will hasten to inform your father of the contents of this letter! Oh, friend, in these days of terror, despotism and despondency, one seeks in vain for sympathy in these regions of secessia, where every heart seems filled with hatred, malice and revenge—where one hears young women talk of turning over on battle-fields "horrid, nasty, grinning skulls of Yankees," with their dainty feet. Then, for the sake of your country, do what you can to arrest all instigators and abettors of this rebellion. Tell your father that about the 11th of this month the Rev. M. D. HOOE will attempt to run the blockade from St. Thomas to Charleston. He has been for some time past in London, where his apparent business was to collect Testaments and Bibles, but where his real object was to write for English journals and exert his influence for the Southern cause. A greater rebel firebrand does not exist. He has friends and sympathizers in Brooklyn, N. Y.; one is Rev. —— ——, Pastor of some church, and another is —— ——, who lives or did live on —— street. Mr. —— has a son in the Federal Navy. They are all in full sympathy with the South, and do what they can to promote the cause. Then in Baltimore, everybody there is for the South. Those that stand very prominent are Mrs. ——, sister to one —— ——, of ——, Va., a most industrious worker for the cause; a Miss ——, sister of ——, and one Mr. —— —— 69 ——. His wife will try and go to Ohio. They should all be sent South. The whole family of —— are in constant correspondence with this place. A Mrs. ——, whose husband is in the Confederate army, ran the blockade some time since. She is a spy of the worst character, and ought not to be tolerated in the North. Her mother-in-law is a Mrs. ——. She also expected to go to Philadelphia. Com. HOLLINS will soon leave here to go to Nassau or St. Thomas, to sail for England, where he expects to take Command of a war-steamer. EWELL has taken the place of Stonewall JACKSON, although he has but one leg. Report says LEE will soon make a forward movement. STUART expects to make a raid from Orange into Pennsylvania.

It is a truth, the rebel soldiers live on rats, and anything else they can get. Corn and wheat, green, and from the field, are common articles of diet. If the Northern army cannot vanquish such a miserable set of starved and naked wretches, then may the Yankee nation become a by-word with all nations on earth! In the North, treason stalks forth in the broad daylight! Here everything is subservient to the cause, and one word of remonstrance is instant death.

STONEMAN had within his grasp the plantations of several of the most prominent rebels—SEDDON, Secretary of War; ANDERSON, of the Tredegar Iron Works; HORSON, son-in-law of Gen. WISE; C. C. LEE, brother of Gen. LEE; HARRISON, Colonel at Drewry's Bluff; besides the farms of hundreds engaged in the Southern service. The damage done canal and railroad was repaired in twenty-four hours after the retreat.

Oh, Sir! the universal cry here is to raise the black flag. Oh! for the hour when the avenging angel shall appear, with torch in one hand and the avenging sword of justice in the other, and consecrate to death and destruction this land and these people, rewarding them with a fate they so richly deserve! When, when will that time arrive? The women and preachers are among the most earnest and determined rebels in the South. They do more to stimulate and keep alive the spirit of rebellion than any other members of society. May a man wearing the Federal uniform is a traitor, and where the men are true their wives are false. It is this which has so often proved ruinous to the Union cause. Here, every mind, heart and arm are bent to serve the cause of the South. Money, property, crops, everything, is sacrificed for the main idea. Thus the South has been able to maintain its position thus far.

As VALLANDIGHAM has announced himself a prisoner of war, they expect to forward him to City Point, in exchange for some rebel. He wishes to go to Canada in order to influence the vote of Ohio. Put the wretch in Fort Warren.

Oh, friend, watch well, and, I beseech thee, allow no appearance of Southern sympathy in your presence. This letter would be my death warrant if discovered.

"Whatever my fate may be,
Do not weep for me."

Now as then, SANTA TRINITA.

[This letter was inclosed in a white envelope, and directed to "Rev. MORGAN DIX." Both were then placed into a buff envelope and addressed to "Miss H. HAINES, New-York. In haste." The direction on both of the envelopes was evidently in the same handwriting.]

EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS—NEGROES.

From the Richmond Enquirer, Dec. 17.

In the matter of exchange of prisoners, the United States Commissioner has been driven by Mr. OULD from point to point, from position to position, until, finally, Gens. MEREDITH and HITCHCOCK have abandoned every point in dispute, except the treatment of negro prisoners. The "Message" of President DAVIS, of Jan. 12, is now made the reason of suspending exchange, notwithstanding that from January to July this "Message" had been in force, and was never once referred to as sufficient cause for stopping the operations of the cartel. The enemy now rest their case upon this "Message." We have already shown that the law of Congress for delivering all negroes and their white officers, captured in arms, to State authorities, for trial under State laws, was too wide in its language, and covered matter that is not within the province of one nation to dictate to another. No nation has the right so say that its enemy shall not employ in its armies a certain class of its people. The composition of armies is a matter belonging exclusively to the authorities of the nation itself. If the Yankees like negro troops, they have the right to employ the free negroes of the United States in their armies, and they have the right to demand for them the proper treatment as prisoners of war. If a nation employs savages in its armies, retaliation is proper and justifiable, not because of the employment of the savages, but for any acts committed by the soldiery not in accordance with the laws of war. So, if the negroes employed by the United States compose a part of those States, and are regularly mustered into their service; if, after capture, they can be proved guilty of acts not recognized as within the rules of civilized warfare, they are not entitled to the rights of prisoners of war, but may be punished as bandits and robbers. And so of the white troops—color has nothing to do with soldiers.

But the case is different as to the slaves and free negroes of these States, captured in the ranks of the enemy. Their detention is justified by the laws of war; their punishment we can provide for, though we should not like to see any enforced, for the poor wretches have no will of their own, and being forced into the ranks are not responsible for their conduct.

Congress, then, should so modify the law as to apply only to the slaves and free negroes of these States captured in the ranks of the enemy. Let us place ourselves right under the laws of war, and leave the consequences to take care of themselves.

If the enemy think proper to leave their soldiers here in prison, because we will not give up our right under the laws of war, to continue their soldiers in prison for our slaves and free negroes, we can do nothing but accept the issue and meet its responsibility. The law, as it now stands, is not within the spirit of the laws of war, and since it is made the last and only cause for suspending the exchange, we hope that it it will be amended, and its provisions confinee to the case of slaves and free negroes of these States captured in arms. Indeed, we see no necessity for any law on the subject.

The Yankees are not going to send their negro troops into the field—they know as well as we do that no reliance can be placed upon them; but as depot guards, prison guards, &c., they will relieve their white troops. This is the use that will be made of them. Should they be sent to field, and be put in battle, none will be taken prisoners—our troops understand what to do in such cases. If any negroes have been captured during the war, as soldiers in the enemy's ranks, we have not heard of them. We do not think that such a case has been reported. The law is, therefore, useless.

A GUNBOAT BLOWN UP BY A TORPEDO.

From the Richmond Examiner, Dec. 19.

We are pleased to learn that on the 1st inst., one Yankee gunboat was blown up in the neighborhood of West Point, on the York River, and another seriously injured. All the crew of the first boat are said to have perished. We have been unable to learn the names of the boats.

[There is no truth in the above report.—ED. TIMES.]

THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

A Storm and the Consequences Thereof—A Train off the Track—What Did and What Might Have Happened—Military Executions—A Raid—The Veteran Corps—Recruiting in Michigan.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Saturday, Dec. 19, 1863.

During the last forty-eight hours a heavy rainstorm has prevailed, flooding all of the low land and soaking the ground so thoroughly everywhere that wherever man or animal steps the track is instantly filled with the permeating element, and, therefore, as well may be imagined, on all thoroughfares the traveling is anything but easy and agreeable; the rivers are also very much swollen—so much so yesterday morning as to be unfordable at several important points—indeed, Mountain Creek was so high that six mule teams were carried over the dam just below the Stevensburgh road, and for a time fording on horseback was impracticable at this point. In a word, this army is experiencing to-day all the hardships pertaining to Winter encampments in the field. To add to our discomfiture yesterday, all communication for the whole day was cut off between headquarters and Washington—a rebel force, under ROSSER, it is said, having made a dash upon the railroad Thursday evening, destroying two small bridges over branches of Pope's Run, wounding and capturing some of the men on duty at that point. They did not get away, however, without a greater loss in wounded and prisoners than we suffered. At the time of this attack, six or eight trains were detained between Bristoe and Catlett's Station by reason of the 11:45 A. M. train from Brandy Station having run off the track. These trains were detained until between one and two o'clock A. M., Friday morning, until the wrecking train could come up and repair the track, and if some enterprising commander of guerrillas had known of the exact situation of affairs, he could, with a very small force have destroyed a large amount of property besides capturing some prisoners. Indeed, the writer hereof, who was a passenger on one of the detained cars heard many of his unwilling companions utter opinions as to the prospect of a raid being made, not at all calculated to quiet the fears of a timid man. For nearly twelve hours the trains remained upon the track motionless—one of the hardest rain-storms of the season prevailing during the time. The persons on board left Alexandria before 12 M., on Thursday, and confidently expected to reach Brandy Station before supper time the same evening. A few only were provided with a luncheon, and fewer with drinkables—that which a majority of soldiers most ask for when they are generally uncomfortable and everything around disagreeable. The fortunate few, however, generously divided what they had; a number ventured to walk in the darkness, half a mile from the train, to the house of a citizen, who, on more than one occasion heretofore has extended timely assistance to Union soldiers, —where they were fed as long as there was anything to feed upon in the house—and in this way, all the circumstances considered, fared better than could have been expected. Brandy Station was reached at about 4 o'clock, Friday morning. As the passengers whose tents were distant, and those relying upon finding friends, of whose locality they knew not, had got comfortably ensconced in the cars expecting to be permitted to remain there until daylight, the chilling announcement was made by one in authority, who acted up to the letter, but not, I am sure, the spirit of his instructions, that the occupants must leave, as his orders (for ordinary occasions, no doubt) were imperative—the cars must be cleared and "locked up." There were some strong expressions of opinion made use of at this juncture, but the order was promptly obeyed, and in a very brief space of time the whole crowd of passengers were standing in mud and water varying from six inches to four feet deep. All took to the change, apparently, as naturally as young ducks. Some wallowed miles away to their homes in the fields; half-a-dozen more fortunate than the rest, had faithful orderlies awaiting them with saddle horse or ambulance, while by far the larger portion made their way to the nearest camp-fire, and vainly endeavored to dry themselves while a rain-storm was in full blast. One sutler was brought to the stool of repentance—some may have reason to doubt the statement, but it is strictly true. I do not know that he gave any outward evidence of regret for exorbitant prices charged for goods, but I did hear him assert most positively, that he never would come to the Army of the Potomac again to make money, and that he would sell out to the first comer without asking any bonus. As everybody knows, the times must be very disagreeable when a sutler talks thus. To the soldier, however, the principal redeeming feature of the whole affair was, that there were some twenty or more good loyal citizens in the train wearing white shirts, nice clothes, steeple-top hats, thin boots and rubbers over them. They had heard of the hardships of soldiers—they never awoke to a realizing sense of these hardships until they landed on Friday morning at 4 o'clock, Dec. 16, 1863, in the mud and water at Brandy Station. One of these unfortunates, the second step he took after leaving a car, went into a mudhole up to his knees; with a "By golly," he pulled himself out with great difficulty, only to slip into another hole almost as deep, losing both of his rubber overshoes before he reached anything like firm ground. But the worst of it all was, several other strangers followed in the wake of the first. I last saw a party of these visitors standing in the smoke of a camp-fire, the subject of much merriment to several soldiers eligible to the veteran corps.

Besides the storm and mud, there was another cause for gloom in these camps yesterday. Eleven deserters were to have been executed in obedience to the sentence of a Court-martial. Whether all the delinquents suffered or not, you will have learned ere receiving this by telegraph from another source. Several more soldiers in the different corps will pass through the same ordeal next week for the same crime. While it casts a gloom over any command to see a soldier hurried into eternity by order of a Court-martial, still all at the same time admit that the punishment is none too severe for the crime committed. Writing of deserters reminds me of what was told yesterday by a gentleman who has recently been on a hunting expedition in the northern part of Michigan. He alleges that there is a large force of organized deserters in the northern part of that State, who have regular pickets and are determined not to be taken alive. The story does not seem probable, but I give it as a subject worthy the attention of the authorities in Michigan.

The work of reënlisting the three years' men is progressing steadily—much faster indeed than the authorities are prepared to comply with their part of the contract. It is safe to say that at least three-fourths of the men eligible to the distinction of belonging to the Veteran corps will join—thus the Spring campaign will open with the élite of the Army of the Potomac as a nucleus for the fresh troops coming into the field during the Winter.

Col. TOWN, of the First Michigan cavalry, now commanding a brigade in the Third cavalry division, obtained permission last Fall to raise an additional battalion for his regiment, and forty days' time to do it in. This battalion has been raised, 500 strong, all volunteers, and it is expected will be in the field ready for service by the 1st of January next.

I cannot close this random letter without assuring the readers of the TIMES that all is quiet on the Rapidan—and is likely to remain so.

E. A. PAUL.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE N. Y. TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Dec. 24.

THE ORGANIZATION OF NEGRO TROOPS.

Adjt.-Gen. THOMAS has returned from the Lower Mississippi and reported his work, as the great organizer of negro troops. It is stated that he has put in the field 26,000 drilled slaves; that these are in due proportions artillery, infantry and cavalry—the latter mounted on mules; that he has given BANKS alone 17,000 of them. Men gather from his conversation that he regards these black soldiers as the best in our service. He has 51,000 women and children under his care. They will be placed on abandoned plantations—the women under wages, the children too, but at the lightest work—the lessees of the plantations being bound to the justest care of both. He is leasing the sugar and cotton estates in Mississippi and Louisana rapidly, and not for stipulated rent, but for a royalty on the produce—$4 a bale for cotton of four hundred pounds, one cent a pound for sugar, and five cents a bushel for corn and potatoes. This rent goes into the National Treasury. The farms pay besides, the direct revenue tax. Gen. THOMAS' report is said to justify his method of leasing the plantations as he found them, with their gin-houses, boiling-house, engines, tools, mules and all, as one of necessity. There was no time to subdivide them—nor to erect new dwellings for a subdivided tenancy. The General will return to his work almost immediately, going to GRANT's army, where he expects to organize ten regiments of negroes. Thence to New-Orleans; thence to Texas; thence to Pensacola, organizing and arming the slaves everywhere, and examining rigidly the white officers who apply to command them. His labors already have won for him the vindictive hate of the rebels. They sought his life in Natchez, while the guest of Mr. MARSHAL. They had troops and artillery in ambush at two points of the Mississippi River to destroy or take the steamer Rocket, on which he was a passenger.

THE ROBBERY IN THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

The amount of CORNWALL's robbery in the redemption bureau turns out to be at least $100,000. How much more he abstracted no one knows, nor is there any official method of ascertaining. Taken to his house by two officers, and there kept constantly in their presence, he at last broke down and confessed his crime, and indicated where the property could be found. A trunk contained $37,500 in five-twenties, $4,000 in Treasury notes, and a large quantity of the cut halves of mutilated notes, which he had not time to assort, and which were awaiting the matching necessary to their passingas vouchers. After the discovery of his robbery, he was kept in a room in the Treasury for two days under surveillance and moral suasion. He would confess nothing, and was sullen in his denial of guilt. His repeatedly expressed desire to see his wife indicated the place of concealment of the stolen money, and he was taken to [illegible] for his trouble. The mutilated notes to be canceled and subsequently burned were cut lengthwise through the middle, one half went to Secretary CHASE the other to the Register. They were counted and summedup according to their denominations, and if they compared with CORNWALL's accounts were returned to his own office to be destroyed by fire. At the last burning, a little messenger boy, who had begged to watch the process, was astonished to see CORNWALL occasionally slip a package of the half notes into the side-pocket of his coat as he was throwing them into the furnace. He innocently inquired of a clerk named PLATT if Mr. CORNWALL had a right to do that thing. The game was up. A trap was laid, and the felon walked right into it. His avowed reason for plunging into this systematic robbery, was his conviction that other Treasury clerks, in responsible and confidential offices, were feathering their nests by stealing, and his determination to have a hand in. A salary of only eighteen hundred dollars a year, and a large family, with the immense cost of living here, helped the fool to take this view of his official rights and personal interests. In each package he pocketed there were always one hundred bills. Frequently these were demand notes of fives, tens, twenties, fifties, one hundreds. Uncut notes, subsequently received and held back to an amount equal to these vouchers, made his hauls sometimes very great—ten or twenty thousand dollars. Immense preparations for Christmas festivities had been made in his home, and a daughter was soon to be married from it.

A GUERRILLA PARDONED.

The sentence of a Court-martial that a Tennessee guerrilla, Dr. AARON JONES, be hung for his numerous crimes, has been disapproved by the President, and the man turned loose.

A SOLDIERS' HOME.

A bill is ready for Congress, on its reassembling, to establish a Soldiers' Home for Volunteers disabled in the service.

DISPATCHES TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Dec. 24.

THE INDIANS AND THE PRESIDENT'S PROCLAMATION.

As the terms of the President's emancipation and amnesty proclamations do not in words include the Indian Territory, efforts are being made by the Indian Bureau to adjust the difficulties growing out of certain Indians having made common cause with the rebel Government, and to base the settlement on the principles asserted in those proclamations. Already, the Creeks have negotiated a treaty with this Government, providing for the abolition of slavery among them, as a condition of their being reinstated in the enjoyment of the benefits which they forfeited by their disloyalty. And similar treaties are contemplated with the Choctaws and Cherokees. The latter, through their own Council, have provided for freeing their slaves, but a stipulation for that end is required in a new treaty.

RE-ENLISTMENTS AND BOUNTIES.

The Adjutant-General's Office has telegraphed to all the army commanders that a law has been passed to the effect that no bounties, except such as are now provided by law, will be paid to any persons enlisted after the 5th of January next. The only bounty provided by law is the $100 authorized by section 5 of the Act of July, 1861. The commanding officers are accordingly required to secure all reënlistments of veteran volunteers possible before Jan. 5, and give immediate publicity to this circular.

REPLY OF THE QUEEN OF SPAIN TO THE EMPEROR NAPOLEON.

The Epoca publishes the following as the text of the reply of the Queen of Spain to the Emperor NAPOLEON's letter of invitation to a Congress:

SIR, MY BROTHER: The very important letter you have been so good as to address me from Paris, under date of the 4th of this month, could not but be taken into consideration both by me and my Government. I consider your Majesty's project very laudible in aiming at the completely pacific solution of the arduous political questions which now keep the peoples in profound agitation.

In order that calm be restored may Providence deign to accord your Majesty the happiness of seeing your projects realized, and add in subduing the immense difficulties which the strife of adverse interests always brings with it.

I agree with your Majesty that the treaties of 1815 are attacked by the debility produced by time and use, besides the forced influence of serious events, which in many cases have resulted in notorious and capital infractions of their letter and spirit.

I also agree with you that if war has always been a great calamity for peoples, it would be still more so now, on account of the disastrous perturbation that it would produce among nations, every day more closely united by the community of their moral and material interests.

Consequently, if your Majesty's idea be realized by the assembly of the European Powers in a pacific Congress, I do not hesitate to afford your Majesty the assurance, in concert with my Government, that Spain will participate therein, either at Paris or any other point that may be selected for the deliberations, and that Spain will cause her voice to be heard in words of justice, peace, and concord, contributing within the limits of her conciliatory councils, to the pacific solution of the serious questions which the Congress has in view in order to consolidate peace and tranquility in the Old and New World.

I profit by this opportunity to renew to your Imperial Majesty the assurance of my consideration and sincere friendship, with which I am, Sir, my brother, your Majesty's good sister, ISABELLA.

THE PALACE, Nov. 14.

REPLY OF RUSSIA.

The following is the text of the reply sent by the Emperor of Russia to the invitation of the Emperor of the French to attend the Congress, as published in the Monitur:

MONSIEUR MON FRERE: While admitting the sad state of affairs in Europe and the usefulness of an agreement between the Sovereigns to whom the destinies of nations is intrusted, your Majesty expresses an idea which has always been my own. I have made it more than the object of a wish; I have found therein the line of conduct I have followed. All the acts of my reign prove my desire to substitute relations of confidence and good will instead of a state of armed peace which weighs so heavily upon nations. As soon as I could do so I took the initiative in making a considerable reduction in our military establishments. During six years I have relieved my empire from the obligation of recruiting, and I have undertaken important reforms, pledges of progressive development at home and of a peaceful policy abroad.

It is only to meet events which might threaten the safety and even the integrity of my States that I was obliged to deviate from that path. My most lively desire is to return to it, and to spare my people sacrifices which their position accepts, but from which it does not escape.

Nothing can better confirm this opinion than a glance at the state of affairs in Europe. Experience testifies that the two conditions of the repose of the world exist neither in an impossible immobility nor in the instability of political combinations which each generation will be called upon to annul and reconstruct on the impulse of the passions or interests of the moment, but rather in the practical wisdom which imposes upon all respect for established rights, and counsels all upon the transactions necessary to reconcile history, which is an ineffacable legacy of the past, with progress, which is a law for the present and the future.

Under these conditions, a loyal understanding between the Sovereigns has always appeared to me desirable. I should be happy if the proposition issued by your Majesty may lead to it. But, in order that it may be practical, it can only proceed from the consent of the other Powers, and to obtain this result I believe it indispensable for your Majesty to define clearly the questions which, in your opinion, should become the subject of an understanding, and the basis upon which this understanding would have to be established. I can in any case assure your Majesty that the end which you pursue, that of arriving without shock at the pacification of Europe, will always secure my strongest sympathy.

I take this opportunity to reiterate to your Majesty the assurance of the sentiments of high consideration and sincere friendship with which I am, Sir, my brother, Your Majesty's good brother, ALEXANDER.

TSARKOE-SELO, Nov. 6, (18th.)

REPLY OF THE EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA.

VIENNA, Wednesday, Dec. 9.

The following is a summary of the letter of the Emperor of of Austria in reply to NAPOLEON III., dated the 15th November:

"The Emperor acknowledges the important objects of the Congress for the settlement of the political questions at present pending, and the security of the future, but wishes, before taking part therein, to learn with some accuracy the bases and programme of the deliberations of the Congress. Should the questions to be discussed be indicated beforehand, and the Powers agree upon the tendency of the deliberations of the Congress, unforeseen accidents which might overthrow everything would be less to be feared. The dangerous and insolvable problems which would create fresh, instead of removing existing complications would then be set aside. This idea is more fully explained in a dispatch of Count RECHBERG to Prince METTERNICH of the same date as the Emperor's letter. It says: 'It is not sufficient to put forward a programme of a negative character as the basis of such important discussions.' The Austrian Government wishes to know how the declaration of the Emperor NAPOLEON relative to the treaties of 1815 is to be understood. These treaties have been partially modified; but so far as they have not been altered they are considered as the foundation of public right in Europe. Some improvements are necessary. Let the French Government point out those it considers desirable. Certain remedies might be more dangerous than the evils themselves. The programme of the Congress must fulfil all the conditions for the maintenance of peace, which is the principal object to be attained."

REPLY OF VICTOR EMANUEL.

The following letter has been addressed to the Emperor NAPOLEON by the King of Italy, in reply to the Congress proposition:

"MY BROTHER: The letter which your Imperial Highness has addressed to me is inspired with a grand and generous thought, to which those who understand the tendencies of our epoch will associate themselves.

A permanent struggle has established itself in a great part of Europe between the public conscience and the state of things created by the treaties of 1815. Hence an anxiety which will only increase until European order is constituted upon the basis of the principles of nationality and liberty, which are the very life of modern peoples.

Before a situation so threatening to the progress of civilization and the peace of the world, your Imperial Majesty has become the interpreter of a general sentiment by proposing to convoke a Congress, the object of which would be to effect a durable understanding between the rights of the sovereigns and the just aspirations of the peoples.

I adhere with pleasure to your Imperial Majesty's proposition. My assistance and that of my people are assured to the realization of this project, which would mark a great progress in the history of humanity.

Directly the meeting of the International Conference occurs, I shall hasten to take part in it, either in person or by deputy.

Italy will bring to the Congress the most sincere spirit of equity and moderation. She is convinced that justice and the respect of legitimate rights are the true foundations upon which to establish a new European equilibrium.

My most ardent desire is that the work of wisdom and of concord which your Imperial Majesty has taken the initiative in may succeed in removing the dangers of war and in strengthening the bonds which ought to exist between nations.

I seize this occasion to renew to you the assurances of inviolable friendship and high consideration, with which I am, my brother,

Your Imperial Majesty's good brother,
TURIN, Nov. 22, 1863. VICTOR EMANUEL.

THE SUMTER AT QUEENSTOWN.

From the Liverpool Post, Dec. 9.

We yesterday announced the arrival of the Sumter (now called the Gibraltar) at Queenstown, with a cargo of cotton, consisting of 330 bales, each weighing 800 lbs. The Gibraltar, commanded by Capt. REED, left Liverpool for Wilmington, on the 4th of July, having on board two large Blakely guns, each weighing 22 tons. One of them is now planted on White Point Garden, and recently, at an elevation of only three degrees, hit a target three miles distant with a shot weighing 7 cwt. On the 15th of August, when in sight of the shore of North Carolina, one of the engines broke down, but was repaired after some delay. On going aloft soon after the accident, Capt. REED discerned three of the blockading squadron, one on the larboard, another on the starboard, and the third directly over the bows, and bearing down on him. Believing it would be ruinous to act otherwise, the Captain hoisted the American pennant and ensign and continued his course. This proceeding, together with his ready response to the hail, quite disarmed the suspicion of the steamer on the bow, although Capt. REED steered so close as to see the men repairing their hammocks and performing their duties on deck. He then got under the guns of the Confederate battery, Fort Fisher, but could not proceed over the bar on account of the state of the tide. His position now attracted the notice of the Federal flagship, which fired on him, and three other Federals bore down on hearing the noise of the firing. Forty-eight shots were fired at him without doing more damage than cutting up the rigging. Capt. REED was detained over two months in Wilmington, as the Confederate Government had serious thoughts of taking the vessel again into service. At length he received permission to leave with a cargo of cotton, and having paid $1,500 to a pilot for the run to Bermuda, he proceeded down the bay, but got aground in the Western Channel and again on the New Inlet. Being at the latter place in dangerous proximity to the blockading squadron, he telegraphed his position up the bay to Fort Caswell, and three launches, each containing twenty men, were sent to his protection. On the third night he succeeded in getting out, and reached Bermuda in two days and a half. The Captain states that the following steamers were captured in running the blockade: Columbia, Nov. 11: Ella, Nov. 12; Ellen and Annie, the 14th; and the Margaret and Jessie on the 14th. The Robert E. Lee was set on fire on the 14th also, in order to avoid capture. The Cygnet has arrived in Bermuda. The Captain states that at Wilmington and Charleston most kinds of provisions are somewhat plentiful; but tea, coffee, sugar, &c., are very scarce.

THE PAMPERO.

From the North British (Glasgow) Mail.

It seems we have not heard the last of the inquiry as to the character and destination of this vessel. Rather would it appear that it is only now emerging into the prominence it is destined to obtain. In connection with it employment is to be supplied to the gentlemen of the long robe. We learn that the issue of those private and preliminary examinations which have been in progress for some time has been that the law advisers of the Crown have resolved upon instituting a formal complaint and prosecution. Mr. JAMES WATSON is agent for the defence, and we understand that a very strong bar has been retained on both sides. It is also said that this is not the only case of the sort likely to become the subject of judicial inquiry in Scotland.

The Blockade of Wilmington.

A STATEMENT BY REAR ADMIRAL LEE.

FLAGSHIP MINNESOTA,
NEWPORT'S NEWS, Va., Dec. 21, 1863.

Hon. Gideon Welles, Secretary of the Navy:

SIR: In reference to the excessive running of the blockade of Wilmington, as reported in the rebel journals and copied in our own, I beg leave to call your attention to the following extracts from private letters recently found on the prize-steamer Ceres, which plainly show that all such statements are fictitious:

Capt. MAFFIT, in a letter to Mr. LAMAR, dated

NEW BOOKS.

TALES OF A WAYSIDE INN, by HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW. 12mo. Boston: TICKNOR & FIELDS.

The announcement of a new volume by LONGFELLOW will stir many hearts with lively anticipations of renewing the springtide of feeling that the poet's earlier works called forth. Nor will they be disappointed in the Tales of the Wayside Inn. The slight machinery of the poem, by which a group of friends, of divers countries, tastes, and professions, wile away the hours at an old New England rural inn, by the recital of tales and stories, is part of the common stock of literature, but affords opportunity for much beautiful description of the locality and the actors. The tales are of varying length and interest, the most important is the "Saga of King Olof," in fourteen chapters or cantos, each in a different metre, like FRITHOF'S "Saga." It is condensed from the "Saga of Olof" in SVARRO STARLESON'S Heims Kingla, and a comparison of LONGFELLOW'S version with the original is a fine poetical study, showing how the poet has seized the picturesque points of the narrative. The student's tale, "The Falcon of Feverigo," is the well-known story of BOCCACIO also versified by LEIGH HUNT; "King Robert of Cicily," the Sicilian's tale, is taken from an old metrical romance; "Paul Revere's Ride" and the "Birds of Killingworth," are familiar to readers of the Atlantic Monthly, but will always be met with pleasure. The last division of the volume, "Birds of Passage," collects the latest fugitive pieces of the author. The book will find its way instinctively wherever the utterances of a true poet are esteemed and cherished.

FLOWERS FOR THE PARLOR AND GARDEN. By EDWARD SPRAGUE RAND, JR. Illustrated by JOHN ANDREW and A. C. WARREN. 8vo. Boston: J. E. TILTON & Co.

Though allied to the annual tribe by its beautiful execution, the interest of this book is perennial and will endure as long as admiration of the beauties of nature's works marks the existence of refined taste and elegant culture. It will interest all classes engaged in the raising of flowers, from the possessors of the aristocratic green-house and conservatory to those whose share of the soil is confined to the contents of the box before their window, or the hanging basket that decorates the only room. It is, indeed, one of the greatest blessings connected with floriculture that its kindly influence may be shared by all classes, however humble may be the scale on which it is pursued. The directions given seem ample for all necessary instruction, and an ornamental charm is imparted to the volume by a profusion of fanciful illustrations on wood. They will compare, without disadvantage, with any recent home or foreign specimens of the art, and give an air of elegance to the practical prosaic part of the work. The mechanical execution of the volume could, indeed, scarcely be improved, and is highly creditable to the young house who may take the credit of producing a Vade Mecum that will be welcome in every home of refinement.

BITTER-SWEET. A Poem. By J. G. HOLLAND, author of "Titcomb's Letters to Young People." Illustrated Edition, with Engravings from the designs of E. J. WHITNEY. Small 4to. New-York: CHARLES SCRIBNER.

It would be difficult to find a work more distinctively American than Dr. HOLLAND'S New-England poem, Bitter-Sweet. In its present elegant shape, adorned with the original illustrations of Mr. WHITNEY, and produced with every luxury of printing, binding, and general getting up that the advanced state of the arts will allow, it forms, intellectually, artistically, and mechanically, a true native American production that no one need be ashamed of by comparison with the finest productions of foreign presses. Mr. WHITNEY'S designs, eighty in number, show great variety of character and skill in embodying the creations of the author. He succeeds best in landscape, but the whole series evinces great versatility of talent judiciously employed in illustrating a work that has secured so large a share of popularity as Dr. HOLLAND'S poem. As a Christian book, possessing a distinctive character of its own, (a thing generally wanting to that class of literature,) there is little or nothing in the market that can compete with the present edition of Bitter-Sweet.

LOUIE'S LAST TERM AT ST. MARY'S—A Christmas Book, by the author of "Ratledge," The Sutherlands," &c. 12mo. New-York: CARLETON.

Stories of school life have lately been abundant according to the subtle influence of fashion, as arbitrary in literature as in other things, which throws into one prevailing form the impressions of many independent and unconnected minds. They will always meet with readers—the old delighting to retrace the steps of their youth, and the young finding the routine of their daily life (often irksome enough in reality) idealized and illuminated by the skill of the writer. The anonymous author of "Rutledge" has by works of greater pretension shown her power of dealing with the subject, and the simple and touching tale of "Louie" will probably be a more lasting and general favorite than works of greater elaboration.

QUEEN MAB. By JULIA KAVANAGH, Author of "Nathalie," &c. Three volumes in one. 12mo. New-York: D. APPLETON & Co.

This is a novel that no little author need be ashamed to have attributed to him. Miss KAVANAGH improves with practice, and holds her own successfully among the later crowd of sensation lady novelists. The plot of Queen Mab is strikingly original, the characters are well developed, and finely discriminated with minute shades of feeling that only a woman can appreciate or describe. There is throughout evidence of power, and the story often conducts us through dark and devious ways. Happiness is dealt out with a sparing hand, even to the heroine, little golden-haired Mabel, the deserted foundling, whose fortunes are the thread that connects the story, which is almost too prodigal in incident and adventure. Queen Mab may be recommended as perhaps the most striking novel of the year.

THE WATER-BABIES—a Fairy Tale for a Land-Baby. By The Rev. CHARLES KINGSLEY, with Illustrations by J. NOEL PATON. Square 12mo. Boston: T. & P. H. BURNHAM.

The Professor of Modern History at Cambridge furnishes with equal grace and readiness milk for babes as well as strong meat for men. This charming little book is a fantasia of the wildest character, and as such, will delight those for whom it is written. But there are hints of a deeper significance behind. In the words of the dedication to the Professor's youngest son "and all other good boys," where he says:

"Come read me my riddle, my good little man,
If you cannot read it, no grown-up folks can."

Grown-up folks may possibly discover in it a sharp satire on some prominent modern scientific notions, not forgetting the Darwinian theory of development. Viewed in any light, it is a book that no one but Mr. KINGSLEY could have written.

HOUSEHOLD FRIENDS. A Book for every Season. Illustrated with Engravings on Steel. 12mo. Boston: TICKNOR & FIELDS.

In its holiday garniture of crimson and gold, and its fine portraits of literary authors, this volume may seem to be principally addressed to the eye, but its contents show a fine taste, and the selections that illustrate the accompanying plates are made with a discrimination that stamps it with a permanent value. A suppressed poem of TENNYSON'S, "The Hesperides," "Goblin Market," (entire,) by Miss CHRISTIAN ROSSETTI; "The Blessed Damosel," a ballad, by her brother, D. G. ROSSETTI; "Little Scholars," by Miss ANNA THACKERAY; "The Ashen Faggot," one of Tom Brown of Rugby's (HUGHES) best stories of English rural life, are only a sample of the good things Household Friends offers for acceptance.

THE LIFE AND LETTERS OF WASHINGTON IRVING. By his nephew, PIERRE M. IRVING. Volume IV. 12mo. New-York: G. P. PUTNAM.

The closing volume of IRVING'S biography conducts the reader through the last twelve years of his life, till he reaches the final scene of all, in the little church of Tarrytown, "loved, wept and honored" by the nation he had so long held enthralled by his genius. The interest of this portion is purely literary, the principal events of the period being the preparation of the revised edition of his works, brought out by Mr. PUTNAM, and the literary history of his Life of Washington. There can be no question of the taste with which the editor has performed his part, by allowing WASHINGTON IRVING to be, through the medium of his correspondence, &c., his own biographer. In this he has happily followed the model set by BOSWELL, and has produced a book that will be placed on the same shelf with the Life of Johnson. By the curious literary statistics given, it is shown that IRVING'S works produced the author in his lifetime $205,383, and that the continuous demand since his death, to last September, has netted to his heirs $34,237. A very full index by Dr. ALLIBONE to the whole work concludes the volume, which is illustrated with a fine engraving of MARTIN'S portrait of IRVING—the last for which he ever sat.

A CATECHISM OF THE STEAM-ENGINE, IN ITS VARIOUS APPLICATIONS TO MINES, MILLS, STEAM NAVIGATION, RAILWAYS AND AGRICULTURE. With Practical Instructions for the Manufacture and Management of Engines of every Class. By JOHN BOURNE, C. E. New and Revised Edition. 12mo. New-York: D. APPLETON & Co.

The rapid sale of Ove English editions of this scientific manual, (the last one of 3,500 copies in ten months,) shows the estimation in which it is held by practical men. The American reprint is adapted to the use of this country by the addition of much important matter, and the illustrations are enlarged and improved. In its present shape, it is unquestionably the best existing guide to the construction and management of the steam-engine.

—Three Little Pet Books, each containing a pleasant story with a moral, by Aunt FANNY, have been published by KELLEY & BROTHER, No. 627 Broadway. The authoress has achieved very marked success hitherto in writing for children, as her series of Nightcap books abundantly proves. This new series has the peculiarity of being written wholly in words of one syllable, a most difficult undertaking, but one in which Aunt FANNY has succeeded admirably. The books are very amusing and instructive, and cannot fail to be popular.

—SHELDON & Co. have published several very interesting books for the young. Walter's Tour in the East is one of them, in which the young traveler is taken to Jerusalem. A Visit to the Isle of Wight, by ABBOTT, is another. The style of both these books is very easy and graceful, and their contents is highly instructive.

—The APPLETONS have sent us four little books for children—Pleasure and Profit, Keep a Good Heart, The Pet Bird, and a little treatise on manners at home and abroad, which cannot fail to be useful. They are all very neatly bound.

PETER PARLEY'S OWN STORY. From the Personal Narrative of the late SAMUEL G. GOODRICH. (Peter Parley.) With Illustrations. 12mo. New-York: SHELDON & Co.

The above round dozen of books for Young People will show how admirably every taste is catered for by our Publishers. The crowded state of our columns prevents a particular examination of each, but purchasers can scarcely go wrong among such a variety of juvenile novelties from houses of established reputation.

LITERARY GOSSIP.

—Mrs. SOMERVILLE, the authoress of The Connection of the Physical Sciences, Mechanism of the Heavens, &c., though now in her eighty-third year, has nearly completed another important book, embodying the latest discoveries concerning the constitution of matter. It will embrace chapters on the solar spectrum, heat, electricity, the correlation of forces, and the constitution of the minute atoms of animal, vegetable and mineral substances, and will afford an example of the highest mental activity at a period of advanced life very rarely if ever equaled.

—While the great prizes of literature have increased to a value never before attained through the present general diffusion of books, the average reward of literary workers in general is still anything but satisfactory, particularly in the abstruser branches. The council of the English Literary Fund, in making their report of authors solvent during the last year, remark: "It is unquestionable that in the present age some branches of literature have obtained signal remuneration, but its graver provinces are but a barren inheritance, while works of imagination are munificently encouraged. All that vast and lofty region which belongs to science and learning is comparatively unproductive. The philosopher, the mathematician, the classical scholar and the divine stand but on the verge of that opulent stream which swells around the more favored literature." The fifty-four applicants relieved by the Society in the past twelve months, they say, would afford striking illustrations of these facts, were they not strictly confidential. As an instance of the contrary fate where well-directed and intelligent labor meets with its due reward, we may mention that it is asserted on credible authority that Mr. JOHN FISHER KIRK secures for the American copyright of his History of Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy, from Messrs. LIPPINCOTT & Co., ten thousand dollars, and from Mr. MURRAY, seventeen hundred pounds sterling for the English edition, making at present rates a total of over twenty thousand dollars for a single work.

—ALFRED TENNYSON has departed from his usual reticence in favor of the Cornhill Magazine, the current number of which for December contains specimens of experimental efforts by him in the classic metres—hexameters, pentameters, &c.—apropos to the controversy waged a short time since between Mr. ARNOLD, Prof. NEWMAN and others, as to whether they were really capable of being naturalized in English. He also offers a sample of a translation of HOMER in blank verse.

—A new series of HUMBOLDT'S correspondence has just appeared, much more satisfactory to the admirers of the philosopher than his letters to VARNHAGEN VON ENSI, published two or three years since. It comprises his letters to HEINRICH BERGHAUS, the celebrated physical geographer, and extending as it does from 1825 to 1855, forms a complete history of geographical science and discovery for a period exceeding thirty years. There is yet a chance that HUMBOLDT'S library may be secured for the United States. After his death a liberal offer was made for it by Dr. COGSWELL, in behalf of the Astor Library, but he was outbid by Mr. HENRY STEVENS, the American literary agent in London, who became the purchaser. Mr. STEVENS is now in the United States for the purpose of disposing of the collection, and has printed a sumptuous catalogue raisonné of its contents, which is in itself a valuable literary monument. In spite of the high rates of exchange, the great abundance of money renders it probable that this library—peculiarly important to America—will speedily find a purchaser.

—It is a usual remark with book buyers this Christmas season that the enterprise of publishers has hardly kept pace with the demand for fine books, and that there is a capacity in the consumers to absorb far more than is proffered them in illustrated and ornamental literature. It must be remembered, however, that the recovery from past depression in the book trade is comparatively recent, while the production of a really fine illustrated book, such as Mr. PUTNAM'S new edition of IRVING'S Sketch Book, is a labor of years, that a thousand circumstances may retard, but can scarcely in any case be hurried. As might be expected, photography seems gradually superseding the various styles of engraving, and the most expensive works of the season, as Messrs. APPLETON'S Lights and Shadows of New-York Picture Galleries, and Gems from the Dusseldorf Paintings, Mr. CARLETON'S Illustrations of the Central Park, and others, are executed in this art, the limits of which, in its varied application, are by no means yet reached.

—The new Anthropological Society of London is active in the diffusion of knowledge concerning its particular branch of science. In addition to a quarterly journal, of which two numbers have appeared, it has recently issued a translation of the Introduction to Anthropology of Prof. THEODOR WINTZ, of the University of Marburg, one of the most able of German philosophical teachers, but hitherto unknown to English readers. It is a review of the whole subject of ethnology, embracing language, historical analogies and psychological investigation, and arriving at conclusions supporting most positively the unity of the human race. It is a great text-book of a science, such as only Germany now produces, and will be welcome to all who take an interest in the study.

—The completion is at last announced of Sir WM. HAMILTON'S long interrupted edition of The Philosophical Works of Thomas Reid. The volume published some twenty years back broke off in the middle of a sentence, but through the editorial care of Rev. H. L. MANSELL, the conclusion of the supplementary dissertations has been obtained from Sir WILLIAM HAMILTON'S papers, with a preface, numerous addenda, &c., now first published.

—Among the American books just issued in London is The Life and Times of Bertrand du Guesclin, a History of the Fourteenth Century, by D. E. JAMIESON, of South Carolina. Mr. JAMIESON is yet unknown to fame, and has selected a subject in the biography of the stern and simple old warrior who freed France from English rule, of considerable capabilities. It will be published in a style usually suggestive of an author's love for his literary offspring; "printed with old-faced type, on HALL'S best toned laid paper, with portrait, in ornamented binding"—and forms two volumes, 8vo.

—Another American book, for whose first appearance in England probably very good reasons might be given, is My Imprisonment at Washington, including my Journal kept at the Old Capitol Prison there, by ROSE GREENNOW, in one volume. Those who remember Mrs. GREENHOW in society at Washington, many years back, will not be surprised to hear that it contains "a portrait of the author." The book is said by its excessive violence of tone to defeat its own object.

—The forthcoming Life of Josiah Wedgewood, the founder of the English manufactory of pottery, in its artistic and commercial relations, is understood to be, as an industrial biography, scarcely second in interest to Mr. SMILES' Life of George Stephenson. The family papers and correspondence of WEDGEWOOD have been intrusted to Miss ELIZA METEYARD, (who, under the signature of "Silver Pen," has been a popular periodical writer,) and the work will appear in two volumes, 8vo, with numerous fine illustrations.

AFFAIRS IN JAPAN.

Murder of a French Officer—Japan and the Civilized World.

KANAGAWA, JAPAN, Thursday, Oct. 15, 1863.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Complicated as our relations with this country have been for the last year, still new difficulties are almost daily arising, which must ere long bring matters to a crisis. The system of political murders and assassinations which have occurred from time to time since the opening of the country to foreign intercourse, (numbering, including the last, some ten or a dozen,) had yesterday another added to the list—not unequaled by any previous ones in barbarity, cruelty, and cold-bloodedness. The facts in the sad case as far as our information goes up to the closing of the mail, are the following: There is a pleasant country road some two miles and a half from the town of Kanagawa, where, from its retirement and secludedness, foreigners have been accustomed to take afternoon rides or walks. It being anything but what may be called a public thoroughfare, (unlike the Tokai edo, the great road to Yeddo, from the southern part of the Empire, and where the last murder occurred,) no one ever dreamed of anything but safety and perfect security in frequenting it. Indeed, we never remember, though we have passed over it many times, seeing anything stirring on it, but country pack horses, and farmers going to and fro from market. It was on this road, while riding quietly along about 2 P. M., a Lieutenant belonging to a small body of the Chasseurs d'Afrique, stationed here by the French for the protection of the settlement, was assassinated by three Japanese armed with swords. He was entirely alone and unarmed, and probably made no defence whatever. So quick and unerring must have been the assault that, though he was mounted and his assailants on foot, he failed to make his escape, even for a short distance, but to all appearances was killed almost instantly. His wounds, numbering six or eight, were fearful, any one of which would have proved fatal. When found, his right hand (the arm being severed completely from his body) was grasping a portion of the reins which had been cut away. In this, as in every case of assassination that has occurred here, the fearful and terrible effects of the two-handed sword worn by all Japanese officials, can hardly be described. Bone, muscle and sinew seem to have melted as it were before it, and the largest limbs of the body are severed as cleanly as if they were but straws. We have seen the body nearly cut in halves by a single blow, beginning at the side of the head and neck, and passing nearly to the pelvis. As soon as the news of the murder was brought in, the Governor notified all the Consuls of the different Treaty Powers that a foreigner had been cut down—It not being yet known to what nationality the victim belonged. Several parties, accompanied by Japanese officials, sent by the Governor, immediately went in search of the body.

Col. G. S. FISHER, United States Consul, with his Marshal, were the first to arrive at the spot where the outrage was committed, and superintended the transportation of the mangled remains to town, where they arrived just at dusk.

Before entering the place, however, he was joined by a company of the murdered Lieutenant's own guard, the French Minister, the Consuls of the other Treaty Powers, and a number of citizens, who filed in solemn procession through the streets to deposit the body at the headquarters of the French forces. There is a significance in this new outrage which cannot be overlooked by us who reside here. This is mainly to be found in the fact of its having been perpetrated in such an out-of-the-way, retired place, giving us unmistakable evidence that assassins are prowling about in the vicinity of the settlement, ready to pounce like wild beasts upon any who may venture out of its precincts. We are restricted now, in effect, to the town, laying within the mote and guard-houses, as we do not imagine any one will venture out alone and unarmed to any distance for some time to come. Going out in parties of four or five may still be unattended with much danger if well armed. The Japan Government have given us repeated warnings that it is not safe to go out into the country, and now we begin to feel it to be true. The conjecture is, that the assassins were the followers of one of the Princes who have been in collision with our naval forces within the last six months. It remains now to be seen what the French will do. They are a fighting people, and are quick and terrible in their retributions and reprisals. But the question is, who are the offenders? Is the Government to be held responsible for the acts of its hostile Princes? It has declared it has not the power to bring subjects of such Princes to justice, let the outrages committed be what they may. As we said before, this must hasten on the contest. The Japan Government must choose whether it will accept foreign alliance to put down these rebel Princes, or it must be itself responsible for the acts of their subjects and give satisfaction, or incur a foreign war of all the Treaty Powers combined. This is the first French subject that has been assassinated, and he is, we believe, too, the nephew of the Admiral now here. We await with anxiety the development of the affair. I-SHI-YA.

LAW REPORTS.

PRIZE DECISION.

United States District Court.

Before Judge Betts.

The United States vs. The Steamer Antona and her Cargo.—This vessel was captured off Cape San Blas, Fla., on Jan. 6, 1863, by the United States schooner Kittatinny. The vessel and cargo were appraised to the use of the United States at the appraised value of $76,353. The process was served by publication, and a claim and answer was filed on behalf of J. and T. Johnson, of Liverpool, as owners of ship and cargo.

The vessel had a certificate of British registry dated at Glasgow, April 24, 1860, on which an indorsement, dated Oct. 16, 1862, stated that George Wing, of Liverpool, was the owner of her. The shipping agreement was made at Liverpool Oct. 31, 1862, for a voyage to Havana and Nassau and back to a port of discharge in the United Kingdom. There was a charter of the vessel by Wing to J. & T. Johnson, the claimants, for a voyage to Nassau and Havana. There was no mention made in the papers of any destination to Matamoras, or of any design to deliver the cargo elsewhere than at Nassau. The cargo was an assorted one, but contained also some articles that were contraband of war. The master of the vessel testified that the vessel was bound to Matamoras, but when captured she was on her way back to Havana in consequence of having to throw coal overboard to lighten her in heavy weather, and that he had been at anchor waiting for daylight to see the land, as having been driven back northward in heavy weather, he wished to ascertain about his chronometer before returning to Havana, and had just raised his anchor when the capturing vessel came in sight. He believed his cargo was consigned to order on arrival at Matamoras. He expected instructions there from his agents at Nassau, and should have waited for instructions before disposing of his cargo. He had taken a Gulf pilot on board, but did not know his name, or that his name was entered in the log-book. He was chased 13 or 14 hours, and changed his course during the chase about 2½ points.

The testimony of the Mate and the carpenter directly conflicted with that of the Master, and proved that the destination of the vessel was Mobile. They prove the taking on board a pilot who was a resident of Mobile, and that they were paid a large sum by the Master at Havana to keep silence about the destination of the vessel; that the Mate was told by the Master, after leaving Havana, that "it was none of his business" where she was going; that the Mate had never heard that she was going to Matamoras, and the vessel was wide off the course given on her papers when she was captured, and altered her course twelve or fourteen points on the appearance of the capturing vessel. Thirty-one shotted guns were fired at her before she came to. Her log-book showed her course from Havana till she anchored close in to the Florida coast, in five fathoms water, to have been generally northwest, or northwest by west.

Held by the Court—That, from all the facts, it is very clear that the vessel was engaged in endeavoring to enter the port of Mobile, in violation of the blockade. Vessel and cargo condemned.

For the United States, Mr. Andrews; for claimants, Messrs. Martin & Smith.

United States District Court.

Before Judge Shipman and a Jury.

INTERNAL REVENUE—FAILURE TO MAKE RETURN.

The United States vs. Henry Brewer.—This was an action against the defendant, who is a boot and shoe maker in Wall-street, to recover the penalty of $500 provided by the Internal Revenue Act, for failing to comply with the requirements of the 68th section of the act, and make the return to the Assessors, which is required to be made every month.

The jury, under the charge of the Judge, rendered a verdict in favor of the Government.

For the United States, Mr. Smith; for defendant, Mr. Tillotson.

UNDERVALUATION—INTENT TO DEFRAUD.

The United States vs. One Bale of Fitch Skins, &c.—This was an action to forfeit the goods for an alleged fraudulent undervaluation of them by the importer on entering them for payment of duty. The goods were imported from Leipsic, and came here by way of Rouse's Point. On their entry here and appraisal the appraisers fixed their value at one hundred per cent. more than the invoice and brought this suit to forfeit the goods. The claimant set up that he was ignorant himself of the requirements of the law, and had acted under the instructions of a Custom-house broker, and without any intention to defraud the Government.

The jury, however, on the evidence found a verdict in favor of the Government forfeiting the goods.

For the Government, Mr. Smith; for claimant, Mr. Joachimssen.

UNDERVALUATION—FRAUD ON THE PUBLIC.

The United States vs. One Case of Silks (N. S.).—This was an action to forfeit the goods for undervaluation. The goods were imported from Switzerland in January, 1862, consigned to Naef & Scheppi, of this City. Upon appraisal here they were advanced by the appraisers more than 25 per cent. above the value stated in the invoice, and thereupon the goods were seized and this suit was brought.

The evidence on both sides went to this question of the value of the goods. The Government called several merchants whose testimony sustained their claim as to value, and the claimants gave the evidence of the consignors and other merchants in Zurich, whence the goods were shipped, and also of one merchant who had bought such goods here before, that the invoice was correct in stating the value, because the goods were not merchantable, but were so made up with oil in them, as that they were not worth so much as they seemed to be, but were calculated to deceive the public.

The jury found a verdict for the claimant. The counsel for the Government at once gave notice of a motion to set the verdict aside, as against the weight of evidence.

For the United States, Mr. Allen; for the claimant, Mr. Wilcoxson.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—DEC. 24.

Before Judge Shipman.

The United States vs. N. S. 11 Case of Silks.—In this action it was sought to confiscate a quantity of silks imported in January, 1862, from Zurich, by the house of Hirzel & Bourgeois, of that City, and consigned to Naef & Schaeppi, of New-York, on the ground that they were fraudulently undervalued in price.

The claimants set up that the goods were not a merchantable article, were heavily surcharged with dye and oils, and were shipped to the United States in a very depressed state of the continental silk market. The shippers and two silk commission houses of Zurich testified to these facts, and also that the goods were not worth in Zurich what they were invoiced at.

The Government produced their official examiner, Mr. Penniman, and as merchant experts Messrs. Constable, Aschman, Doler & Gourd, who, on a formal appraisement of the goods raised them over the invoice an average of about twenty-five per cent., but in making their appraisement they did not appear to have regarded the fact that the goods were very heavily charged with dye.

The jury under the charge of the Court returned a verdict acquitting the goods.

Mr. Allen for United States; Messrs. Kaufmann, Frank & Wilcoxson, for claimants.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The Mexican town on the Rio Grande, opposite Brownsville, is called Matamoros—the last syllable written with an O; but outside of Mexico it seems always written Matamoras, which is a calumny on the chivalry of Spain. The place was named after the Mexican hero, Gen. MATAMOROS, who was, doubtless, descended from some valiant slayer of Infidels in the old country, for the name, rightly spelled, signifies Kill-Moors, but when written Matamoras, it means Kill-Moorish women. As I suppose myself to be descended from old Mr. Kill-Moors, I view the misspelling of his name as a reflection on the family, and beg you will exhort the public to correct it. The wrong name occurs repeatedly in LAMAR & Co.'s correspondence on blockade running; and I would admonish that concern in particular to correct the abuse, for the chivalry of Georgia ought to respect the chivalry of Grenada.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
RUFINO MATAMOROS DE ALFASSERO.

THURSDAY, Dec. 24—P. M.

The Stock Exchange Brokers made half a holiday of Christmas Eve to-day. The Board adjourned over to Saturday forenoon, after making the customary appropriations for Christmas charities. The meeting at the Public Board also adjourned over at 1½ o'clock P. M. There was some outside business done on the Street at a later hour, but without alteration in prices, which, on the Railway list, ruled with much steadiness through the forenoon. On Government Stocks the demand was good at full rates. Among the miscellaneous shares there was a sudden decline of 5@6 ₱ cent. in Almaden Quicksilver, ascribed to a rumor that the Company would encounter difficulty in settling their boundaries with the United States Government. But this, we are disposed to believe, should be taken with very great allowance as to any serious or permanent influence on the stock by actual holders. The following prices were made at the close of the market, in comparison with last night. Gold and Exchange ruled a fraction lower than yesterday, and closed 151⅞ and 165½@166 respectively. There was a rise of 3 ₱ cent. on Hudson River Shares. There was a partial recovery from the extreme decline on Quicksilver:

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

By last night's mail we received files of Richmond papers to the 22d, inclusive. They are generally devoid of news. Much excitement had been occasioned by AVERILL'S daring raid, and all the accounts of the vast destruction of property by his command are fully confirmed. It was thought at one time that he was endeavoring to reach Danville to liberate the prisoners there. The rebels were confident of capturing him, and declared that if he escaped their cavalry had better be re-organized. Col. STREIGHT had escaped from Libby Prison, but was subsequently recaptured.

A correspondent writing from Chattanooga, under date of 17th inst., says: "Gen. BAIRD, with details from various regiments, had been for two days burying the dead. He found no evidence of outrages on the dead by the enemy, and but few, comparatively, were unburied. The rebels had no metallic shovels or spades and were compelled to use wooden ones. Where the surface of the ground was slightly gravel, the dead were seldom or poorly buried. Col. VANDEVER and Gen. TURCHIN were on the field, and their commands buried about two hundred. Many rebels were found unburied.

Yesterday, two soldiers, named H. S. HOWARD, of Gen. SCAMMON'S brigade of Western troops and J. R. MCCULLOUGH, of the First Wisconsin, reached Washington from Richmond, and reported themselves at the Provost-Marshal's office, dressed in gray clothes made by Union ladies at Richmond from "secesh" blankets. HOWARD had been employed by the rebels in charge of Alabama Hospital No. 22, and MCCULLOUGH was also employed as a hospital steward. Having ascertained that if they could escape they would receive assistance from the Union people of Richmond, who are more numerous than is generally supposed, MCCULLOUGH feigned to be dead, and was carried out in a coffin, and HOWARD passed the guard in the night. Their escape was effected on the 8th instant, and they remained in the city until the 17th. Some friends took charge of the men, and suits were made for them out of rebel blankets, and passes were furnished which enabled them to get out of the city. These persons report that our men are suffering great hardships in the rebel prisons and hospitals. The rations of the rebels themselves are very scanty, consisting of a piece of corn bread and semi-occasionally a piece of bacon. They represent that the average daily number of deaths of our prisoners in the hospitals in the city is thirty-five.

Adjt.-Gen. THOMAS has returned from Mississippi and Louisiana, where he has been engaged in organizing black troops and leasing Government plantations. He has organized 26,000 colored soldiers, and will shortly leave for Tennessee to organize regiments there.

GENERAL NEWS.

Hon. B. F. COPELAND, until recently a Deputy Collector at Boston, died in Roxbury on Tuesday, at the age of 65. He served in both branches of the Legislature, and was a member of Gov. BRIGGS' Council.

Neither Board of the Common Council had a quorum at their meetings yesterday, and both Boards adjourned to Monday—the Aldermen to 1 and the Councilmen to 4 o'clock P. M.

RAILROAD TRACKS IN STREETS.—The passage of the ordinance giving certain holders of an omnibus grant the right to run cars on the track of the Third-avenue Railroad, brings up the question of City Railroads in a new shape. Mr. MILLS, it seems, held the right to run a line of omnibuses through certain streets. The Third-avenue Railroad Company obtained a grant to lay down a track and run cars over the same route. This interfered with Mr. MILLS very seriously, and he has now obtained the grant to use their track, on paying fair compensation, for the purpose of enjoying his original rights, and saving them from destruction. The Mayor vetoed the ordinance but approved of the main principle involved. He did not believe that any private person or company could have an exclusive right of property in the streets of the City.

We hope this principle will be sustained by the Courts. It will save us from the infinite impositions and evils likely to flow from the system which has obtained hitherto. Our City Railroads are rapidly monopolizing the streets and using them with sole reference to their own profit. All attempts to regulate them and secure from them anything like justice to the public, have utterly failed. The streets belong to the City, and the City Government should never relinquish its supervision and control of them. The railroad tracks laid down in them should be regarded as only another style of pavement, and should no more be owned and controlled by private companies than any other kind. We concur fully in the suggestions of the Journal of Commerce, that the City should own all these tracks and license persons to run cars upon them, just as the public convenience may require.

Wendell Phillips' Speech at the Cooper Institute.

WENDELL PHILLIPS ought to be the humblest Anti-Slavery man in this country. In all the history of human progress, there never has been a more signal illustration that fanaticism is the worst of all counsellors than his case affords. By his own confession, made on a public platform in this city, he was, for twenty years before this rebellion, an out-and-out disunionist. That is to say, he was laboring for the same end for which JEFF. DAVIS was conspiring. They both were for destroying the Union; and, to all intents and purposes, they both were exactly the same traitors to the country. But WENDELL PHILLIPS was more than that; he was, what JEFF. DAVIS was not, a traitor to his cause. DAVIS was true to Slavery; and it is precisely because he was so that he sought to establish a Confederacy whose corner-stone should be Slavery. PHILLIPS was false to freedom; because he was for surrendering to Slavery, without a struggle, the very Confederacy for which it was willing to risk everything.

If it be urged in Mr. PHILLIPS' behalf that his heart was right, the plea can be granted only at the expense of his head. It was notorious, then, to all sensible men, that disunion was the very policy of all others best calculated to save, and perpetuate, and aggrandize Slavery. Even apart from any reasoning upon the subject, which could have had but that one conclusion, sufficient proof was found in the single fact that all the foremost champions of Slavery at the South were the very men who were also foremost in their efforts to break up the Union. Every school-boy now knows that the peaceful separation which WENDELL PHILLIPS agitated for would have founded a Slave Empire of gigantic power and terrific tyranny. Had a conclave in pandemonium debated the question how to fasten upon this continent a woe that should be supremely infernal, it would inevitably have hit upon exactly the same Slave Confederacy that WENDELL PHILLIPS, for twenty years, as a disunion man, did his best to promote.

We therefore say that it becomes this man to be humble. He is not so. Of all Anti-Slavery men, he is the very one who is the most arrogant and abusive. He has the hardihood to stand up before a New-York audience, on the very platform where he proclaimed his disunionism, and take ABRAHAM LINCOLN to task for his unwise policy toward Slavery. He who, in his blind infatuation, would once have gratuitously given to Slavery that for which it is now pouring out rivers of blood and untold treasure, presumes to arraign the author of the Emancipation Proclamation for lack of enlightened fidelity to Anti-Slavery principle! He has the assurance to charge upon ABRAHAM LINCOLN that "he either does not understand his epoch, or is not equal to it," and to say, that "if the Amnesty Proclamation is the level of his mind, he cannot be trusted."

A few days ago Dr. CHEEVER publicly charged HENRY WARD BEECHER with heresy in Anti-Slavery principles, and summoned him to the public platform to purge himself. Everybody felt it to be ludicrous. And yet it is sad to see these displays of weakness in men who really combine great talents with genuine sincerity. We say sincerity—not earnestness. We will not admit that such fiery zeal has any affinity whatever with the cool, calm resolution that marks true moral earnestness. The narrow vision and bitter intolerance of the one, and the large circumspection and generous allowance of the other, are as wide as the poles asunder. It may be set down, once for all, that these men, who have so long been extremists, will never be satisfied. Extreme views on any subject, we care not what, if long entertained, are almost certain to have a malign influence upon their possessor—are almost sure to beget arrogance, and intolerance, and anger, and hatred, and malice, and every species of uncharitableness. The whole world is witness to the fact how often a zeal which begins in the purest of intentions ends in absolute moral blindness.

But, had Mr. PHILLIPS the soundest judgment and sweetest temper in the world, we should still deny that he was a fit man to pass upon the policy of President LINCOLN. We should deny it, because he has no right standard—for precisely the same reason that the Mohammedan is no fit judge of Christian duty, nor the monarchist of republican obligations. President LINCOLN has taken a solemn oath to preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States. That is his supreme obligation. Mr. PHILLIPS, though he now calls himself a Union man, has never taken an oath to support the Constitution, and, so far from regarding it as his supreme obligation, don't even regard it as having any obligation at all. He has made it more than once a matter of boasting that he was not an American citizen,—that he had never voted, and that he had never taken any part in the political affairs of the United States. He professes now to be in favor of preserving the Union and maintaining the Constitution,—but it is not from any love of either; it is simply because he hopes to make both subservient to the one great purpose of his political efforts—the enfranchisement, enrichment and elevation to supremacy of the negro race. We share his abhorrence of Slavery, and we admire his zeal for the welfare of the negro; but these ends are not of more importance than the preservation of the Union, nor is any man truly loyal and patriotic who would make them paramount to that great object. Slavery will perish if the Union is saved;—but a blind zeal for its destruction may involve the destruction of the Union also. The friends of the Union and the opponents of Slavery will find ABRAHAM LINCOLN, in the long run, a safer counsellor and a much wiser leader than WENDELL PHILLIPS.

The $300 Exemption.

The proposal to rescind the $300 exemption clause in the bill providing for a National Draft, has called public attention to the subject and led to a much more thorough discussion of it than preceded its original passage. It is by no means certain that the public good demands, or that public sentiment would sustain, the repeal of this clause. Unquestionably very plausible objections may be urged against the exemption, but so they may against every project that can be devised.

In one particular its repeal would have a highly satisfactory result. It would not only place everybody on a nominal equality—and this is what the Copperheads were clamoring for last Summer—but it would place poor men all over the country upon a real equality. What distressed the July rioters so much was that those who could raise $300 escaped service, while those who could not were obliged to take the field. This was doubtless an apparent injustice, but the proposed change in the laws will effect no change in the principle on which the commutation was based. The men who have the most money will still be able to stay at home, and the only difference will be, that it will take more money now to enable a man to stay at home than before. The rich are just as comfortable as ever, and the class on whom the striking out of the clause will fall heaviest will be decent, respectable mechanics and clerks, who could raise $300, but who will find $1,000 out of their reach.

But the system of providing substitutes for "indigents" at the expense of the county, which was set on foot after the riots, and was in reality far more unfair than the commutation clause itself, will, if that clause is repealed, receive its death-blow. The county can, perhaps, afford to pay $300 to secure the exemption of a few thousand of "poor but honest" conscripts, but it will hardly undertake to deal with these interesting cases to the tune of $1,000 or $1,500 a head. And we are very glad of it. There could not, in a national point of view, have been a more decidedly unfair and demoralizing proceeding, than the wholesale exemption of all the "indigents" who happened to live in wealthy cities, while the poor of the country districts, where there were no rich men to levy exemption fees upon, were left to their fate. There was no reason whatever why a conscript who lived in New-York, and was unable to raise $300, should not shoulder his musket and march along with a man in the same position in Cattaraugus County, except the fact that the former has wealthy taxpayers for his neighbors. And if the thing had continued, there could hardly have been anything better calculated to stir up intense sectional hate. In the West there is but little money, though there is plenty of everything else, and the West has contributed lavishly of her blood to this war, and will doubtless continue to do so to the end, commutation or no commutation. We may imagine, therefore, how she would have felt if she had seen New-York City, as the war wore on and the drain on human life grew deadlier and deadlier, steadily keeping her own population, poor and rich, out of the fray, and buying up substitutes all over the country to take their places in the ranks.

We are by no means certain that the exemption clause should be repealed. There must be some provision for exemption,—that is perfectly clear: and we have seen nothing as yet suggested which promises to be more fair and to do less wrong, than the one now in force. It has gone through a very severe ordeal, but has on the whole maintained its hold as well as could possibly be expected on public favor. But we hope something will be done to prevent large cities from releasing by wholesale donations their whole population from duties which should fall upon them in common with the rest of the country.

Care of the Wounded in Battle—An Ambulance Corps.

Senator WILSON'S bill, organizing a uniform ambulance corps for service in all the Union armies will, if passed, supply a serious defect. The medical department has felt the want of something of this kind ever since the war began, and has made strenuous efforts to have it supplied, but without much success until last August, when Gen. MEADE issued General Order No. 85, supplying it so far as the Army of the Potomac was concerned. We published ten days ago a letter from an "army surgeon," commenting on and explaining the provisions of this order, and so clearly, that it has left us but little to say as regards the details of the system.

Most of our readers doubtless know that the practice in all our armies has hitherto been either to leave wounded on the field until the action is over, or else to leave it to their comrades to carry them to the rear, and place them under the care of the surgeons. The objections to this were, that it was irregular, uncertain and very detrimental to the service. Whether a wounded man was removed or not, depended on the inclination of those near him. It was not their business to attend to him, and the best and most valuable men, feeling it to be their first duty to keep their places in the ranks, and maintain the fight, would not attend to him. The cowards and skulkers, on the other hand, who are always on the watch for an excuse for dropping out of fire, were only too eager to undertake the task, and, as might be expected, did it badly, "hastily," and with much unnecessary suffering to the patient; their main object being, of course, to secure their own safety as fast as possible. What with cowardice, unwillingness to fight, and good nature, the losses caused in this way to the various regiments in most of our actions have been very great, and they were aggravated by the fact that they usually occur at moments when every man is of the utmost value. If for every wounded man that falls, a well man throws down his musket and proceeds to convey or assist him to the rear, it will be easily seen that the enemy's fire becomes doubly effective. We may add that these remarks apply to all armies which do not possess an ambulance corps, as well as to our own.

The only remedy for this is the presence in the field, in the rear of every division actually engaged, of a body of men who shall be provided with stretchers and ambulances, and trained in their use, and whose sole business it shall be to gather up the badly wounded and carry them to the field hospitals. And they must be regularly officered and under military discipline, and subject to just the same penalties for misconduct as the rest of the army. A large part of their work has necessarily to be done under fire, and experience has shown that nothing but military discipline will secure the faithful performance of any duty that has to be performed under such circumstances. This is what has been supplied to the Army of the Potomac, and it is what Senator WILSON'S bill proposes to extend to the whole army. We need hardly say that if the plan be carried out, it will not only save an enormous amount of suffering, but greatly increase the efficiency of the troops when actually engaged.

There is but one thing more needed, when this is done, to secure for the army almost all that organization can do for it, viz.: the creation of a Transport corps, with enlisted men as teamsters, and subject to the same discipline and officered in the same manner as the cavalry and artillery. The transport service is at present performed by civilians, who are mostly drunken ruffians, are subject to nobody's control, and are liable to no greater penalty for misconduct than simple dismissal. As might be expected, they plunder the stores, they neglect the horses, break the wagons and harness, run away in action and under fire, are always rowdyish, unpunctual and untrustworthy. We have not the slightest doubt that they have caused, through their rascality, hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of losses to the Goverument already. They frequently imperil whole armies by their loitering on the road, or upsetting their wagons in it and blocking it up. During the height of the distress at Chattanooga, after the battle of Chickamauga, they plundered several wagon-loads of delicacies belonging to the Sanitary Commission, and intended for the sick and wounded. In short, there ought to be a clean sweep made of them, and the sooner the better. There is no other army of the size of ours dependent on such people for its transportation.

CHRISTMAS AMUSEMENTS.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The rarest treat of the season is offered by Mr. MAPLESON, who gives to-night, for the third time, GOUNOD'S opera of "Faust." This fine work is the present sensation in musical circles, and people who would have something to talk about when they go home, should see it. The caste is better than it was last season. In one respect, namely, the Valentine, which will be played by Signor BELLINI. In other respects it is the same; indeed, in other respects it could not be improved.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—BUCKSTONE'S comedy of "Married Life" is the attraction here.

WINTER GARDEN.—The greatest and most legitimate success of the season, "The Ticket-of-Leave Man," one of TOM TAYLOR'S best works, will be played to-night.

BROOKLYN ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—Mr. C. W. CLARKE, a well-known and popular artist, gives a grand dramatic entertainment at this establishment to-night. The pieces are, "Still Waters Run Deep" and "Don Cæsar de Bazan." Several popular artists take part in them; but it is only right to say that the Miss HENRIQUES announced to play the part of Lazarillo, is not the favorite young artiste connected with Wallack's Theatre.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—Variety is not only the spice of life with Mr. and Mrs. BARNEY WILLIAMS, but the solid pudding also. A change of bill with these popular artists means always a fresh access of patronage on the part of the public. Last night three pieces were revived—none of them new—but all of of them sufficient, it would seem, to stir the popular good-will and crowd the house. The first was the Irish drama called "All Hallow Eve," the second the comedietta called "Yankee Courtship, or Away Down East," and the third, the roaring farce called "Barney the Baron." In these well-known trifles, Mr. and Mrs. BARNEY WILLIAMS are seen to advantage. They are constantly before the audience. What more need be said? Nothing, except that the house was kept in a constant roar of laughter. The pieces were produced in a satisfactory manner, and acted spiritedly by the members of the company. They will be repeated to-night.

DE CORDOVA AND THE SANITARY COMMISSION.—The success which attended the recent production of Mr. DE CORDOVA at the Academy of Music, has induced the friends of the Sanitary Commission to give a grand literary and musical entertainment at the Brooklyn Academy on Tuesday next. The programe includes an overture by the Seventh Regiment Band, Mr. DE CORDOVA'S new poem, "The Soldier," and the performance of an original patriotic arrangement by Miss BLANCHE CARPENTER, the youthful pianist, whose début at the last Philharmonic was so brilliantly successful. After this a grand promenade concert will be given, and a general season of festivity enjoyed. The affair is under the supervision of a Committee comprising the names of Brooklyn's best citizens, and will undoubtedly be one of the gayest of the many cheerful Academic reunions for which the current season is notable.

OLYMPIC THEATRE.—Mrs. JOHN WOOD added another bright little piece to her programme last night. It was called "Mischief Making," and, like everything else played at this theatre, belongs to a past period, when farce writing had not absolutely sunk into disrepute. The principal character, Mme. Manette, is a quick-tongued, unscrupulous, intermeddling, malicious washerwoman, whose principal occupation is meddling with her neighbors' business, and setting all the village by the ears. Her operations in the piece are confined to a rustic and his intended bride, between whom she contrives to foment a quarrel, involving also the brother of the bride. The materials are slight; the treatment much longer than it is broad, but this is entirely unimportant. The part of Manette is Mrs. JOHN WOOD, and Mrs. JOHN WOOD is the play. We have rarely seen this exuberant and thoroughly jolly artist to greater advantage. Her buoyancy and volatility were absolutely intoxicating. People left the house with sore eyes and red faces, as though they had been having a night of it. A medley song, introduced by Mrs. JOHN WOOD, was excellently sung; so much so that the audience almost perpetrated the cruelty of encoring it. Mr. DAVIDGE played the part of the rustic lover with a broad and genial sense of fun.

The farce of "My Preserver" was also revived on this occasion. It is too well known to call for comment. The artists who most distinguished themselves were Mrs. SEDLEY BROWN, Mrs. SLOAN, Mr. JAMIESON and Mr. J. H. STODDARD. Both pieces, and the comedietta of "Easy Shaving" are on the bills for to-night.

PARK THEATRE.—There will be two performances at this charming little establishment to-day. The new fairy spectacle called the "Sleeping Beauty in the Woods" is exactly the thing for the holidays.

HOPE CHAPEL.—The Mammoth Stereoscopticon conveys its spectators to every land at the smallest possible cost. It is an instructive and admirable entertainment.

BARNUM'S MUSEUM.—The multifarious attractions of this establishment will be at the command of the public from daybreak until night. In the lecture hall, TOM TAYLOR'S new drama, the "Ticket-of-Leave Man," will be played, afternoon and evening. At all times a pleasant and profitable hour can be passed at this establishment.

IRVING HALL.—The New-York Harmonic Society will give their annual performance of HANDEL'S "Messiah" to-night.

THEATRE FRANCAIS.—A grand holiday bill is provided here to-night. The items are: "Les 37 Sous de M. Montaudon," "Le Feu au Couvent," "Le Tigre de Bengal," and "La Petite Chanteuse."

BENEFIT AND LAST APPEARANCE OF MR. HARRISON—PARK THEATRE.—Mr. HARRISON made his farewell appearance at the Park Theatre, on the occasion of his benefit, on Monday night. The house was brilliant with the beauty and worth of the city, and the affair passed off with great éclat. To-night, a superb holiday bill is offered, with the full strength of the company—a company which, by reason of valuable additions, has taken rank with the best of our metropolitan troupes.

BROADWAY AMPHITHEATRE.—At the Broadway Amphitheatre, to-day, three performances will be given—morning, afternoon, and evening—and an attractive programme is announced for each entertainment. Mr. LENT is now giving exhibitions every afternoon as well as evening, in which the famous lady equestrienne, Mme. LOUISE TOURNAIRE, and all the principal members of the admirable circus troupe appear. The ménage exercises of Mme. TOURNAIRE are greatly admired by the ladies.

NATIONAL EXHIBITION IN VENEZUELA.—Judge CULVER, the American Minister at Caracas, Venezuela, South America, has been notified by the new Government, that at the National Exhibition in that country, which is to be opened at Caracas, the first day of January, 1864, any American contribution of whatever kind, will be received and placed on exhibition the same as the contributions of that country, and will be exempt from the payment of any duties, if imported in good faith for purposes of exhibition.

The new Federal Government, recently installed in Venezuela, are determined to spare no pains to make this first National Exhibition of the works of art and industry, worthy of the liberal, enlightened, and progressive views of its President and his Cabinet.

It will be a fine gallery, in which to present the skill, genius and talent of the Yankee land. The exhibition will probably continue through the month.

GEN. HALLECK'S REPORT.

Army of the Cumberland—Movements on the Mississippi—Halleck's Orders to Rosecrans—His Mistakes—Battle of Chickamauga.

THE BEECHES, Wednesday, Dec. 16, 1863.

I did not expect to be sustained so fully in my statements as I have been by the report of Gen. HALLECK. Its negative and positive testimony, taken together, are quite remarkable. You have no space, nor I time, for more than two or three brief notes, which are necessary to illustrate and sustain what I have heretofore said.

1. Gen. HALLECK omits altogether to state any plan or policy in carrying on the war, although he gives a very systematic history of its transactions in the year past. He is not to be blamed for this, however, since he testifies that at a very important crisis the army was wholly wrested from his hands.

2. He omits to give any account or reason for the operations of GRANT'S army from the 5th of July to the 1st of October. He does state, however, what I have said, that the army was scattered, and did nothing but the capture of Little Rock.

3. He omits altogether to give any reason why ROSECRANS was not reinforced in August and September, but, on the contrary, seems to think that the Army of the Cumberland was amply sufficient to conquer all the armies of the South which lay between the Blue Ridge and the Mississippi; and, judged by the skill of the General, or the gallantry of the men, it was!

4. "Our correspondent" of the Tribune having stated that "whatever the course dictated by sound strategy may have been, an advance was ordered, notwithstanding the wishes of Gen. ROSECRANS to the contrary, and the order obeyed," Gen. HALLECK says, in his telegraphic letter of the 12th of June, that he did not order him at all. He admits that a General in the field ought to direct his own movements. He does read Gen. ROSECRANS a lecture, much more in the style of Thersites than that of Achilles. When the provisions of the army had got enough ahead to permit an advance it did advance.

5. ROSECRANS' remark, in his letter of the 21st, (published by HALLECK,) that this nation should not engage "all its forces in the great West at the same time, so as to leave it without a single reserve to stem the current of possible disaster," was such plain common sense and wisdom, that it only needs the practical illustration of BRAGG'S advance from the Tennessee to the Ohio, in 1861, and threatening Cincinnati, to make it palpable to the most obtuse intellect. That whole advance was caused by the total want of any reserve in the entire Ohio Valley. The few raw regiments from Ohio and Kentucky arrived at Richmond, Ky., just in time to be overwhelmed by the veterans of BRAGG.

6. HALLECK says, very truly, that the results in driving the enemy out of Middle Tennessee, and from the fortified passes of Tullahoma, "were far more successful than was anticipated." This is well said, and is just.

7. "Our correspondent" says that ROSECRANS had conceived a grand "theory" of BRAGG'S retreat, &c., &c., and was about to pursue him into Georgia, and that was against the positive instructions of the War Department. Let us see how this corresponds with HALLECK'S report. HALLECK has published his principal instructions. On the 9th of September a reconnoissance developed BRAGG'S evacuation. On the 11th, (mark the date,) HALLECK telegraphs thus:

After holding the mountain passes to the west of Dalton or some other point on the railroad to prevent the return of BRAGG'S army, it will be decided whether or your army shall move further south into Georgia and Alabama.

It is reported here by deserters that a part of BRAGG'S army is reinforcing LEE. It is important that the truth of this should be ascertained as early as possible. H. W. HALLECK, General-in-Chief.

Major-Gen. ROSECRANS, Chattanooga.

On the same day he telegraphs Gen. BURNSIDE thus:

Gen. ROSECRANS will occupy Dalton or some point on the railroad to close all access form Atlanta, and also the mountain passes in the west. This being done, it will be determined whether the movable force shall advance into Georgia and Alabama or into the Valley of Virginia and North Carolina.

H. W. HALLECK, General-in-Chief.

Major-Gen. BURNSIDE, Cumberland Gap.

Here we have the exact truth. Not only did the War Department send no orders to ROSECRANS which he disobeyed; but, on the 11th inst., they knew of the exact movements of his corps, made no objection, and concurred with them, even so far as the occupation of Dalton. On the 12th Gen. ROSECRANS telegraphed there were indications of danger. On that day Gen. HALLECK was in doubt whether BRAGG was going to LEE or LEE to BRAGG! It was certainly a very interesting piece of information to get at, and it is curious to trace the route it came by. The Army of the Potomac did not know whether they had a few dozen divisions, more or less, in front of them. On the 14th MEADE informed the War Department that he thought LEE'S army had been reduced by LONGSTREET'S corps, and perhaps by some regiments of EWELL'S and HILL'S. On the 13th FOSTER telegraphed that cars had been running all night from Petersburgh. By the 14th inst. the Government was able to ascertain that BRAGG was being reinforced from LEE. Well, put LONGSTREET'S veteran corps, with 15,000 Georgia militia, held in readiness weeks before by Gov. BROWN, together with some portion of JOHNSTON'S troops, and you have BRAGG reinforced by the 19th inst. with 40,000 men, most of them veteran troops. On the 14th inst Gen. HALLECK telegraphs FOSTER to defend Norfolk! On the same day he telegraphs HURLBUT (at Memphis) to "hurry forward reinforcements" to ROSECRANS. On the same day he telegraphs BURNSIDE that it is believed the enemy will attempt "to concentrate," and this is the first we hear of it—five days before the battle! Whether any more instructions were sent ROSECRANS in the five days left is unimportant, as Gen. HALLECK openly testifies (and in this the staff-officers of the Army of the Cumberland agree) that they were all "general," and thus the idea of Gen. ROSECRANS having started off to pursue BRAGG, on an imaginary theory, and disobeyed positive instructions, is dissipated into thin air. Like Prospero's spirits, this fancy piece has vanished, and left not even a wreck behind.

8. The only remaining point I shall make here is a statement which Gen, HALLECK had better have omitted, as he did some other things:

"Our right and part of the centre had been completely broken, and fled in confusion from the field, carrying with them to Chattanooga their commanders McCOOK and CRITTENDEN, and also Gen. ROSECRANS, who was on that part of the line. His Chief-of-Staff, Gen. GARFIELD, however, made his way to the left, and joined Gen. THOMAS, who still remained immovable in his position."

Gen. GARFIELD can testify to the greater part of that transaction. I understand the facts to be these: Gen. ROSECRANS, when the troops broke, was separated from THOMAS by dense woods; the best way to join him was to regain the road, and in doing that he and Gen. GARFIELD met in the village of Rossville. Gen. ROSECRANS thought they had but separated in different ways to accomplish the most good possible, and GARFIELD went from Rossville to THOMAS, and ROSECRANS went to Chattanooga to take care of the trains and defences. Whether they were wise for himself or not is unimportant, since it had no bearing on the campaign, the battle, or the result; nor was he carried away with the broken troops.

Whatever Gen. HALLECK may have intended, or whatever the popular judgment may be on his merits, I shall thank him for having presented evidence enough to destroy forever the wanton libels which ignorance and malice have aimed at Gen. ROSECRANS. The fame of the General of the Cumberland is now like HOOKER'S battle "above the clouds." Mists and shadows lie below, while the sun of truth illumines the summit.

A VETERAN OBSERVER.

The Remains of Gen. Corcoran.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Dec. 24.

The Sub-Committee of the Committee on National Affairs, from the City of New-York, consisting of Alderman OTTIWELL and Councilmen BRANDON, KEENAN, MCCONNELL and HEALY, who left this City yesterday for the purpose of bringing on the remains of Gen. CORCORAN, on arriving here waited upon Gen. MARTINDALE, the Military Governor of the District of Columbia, in reference to the transmission of the remains of the deceased to New-York. The General cheerfully rendered all the assistance necessary by ordering a special train to convey the body from Fairfax Court-house to Alexandria, and detailed a regiment of infantry to escort the remains to the depot of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. The Committee expect the body to arrive in New-York by the early train to-morrow morning.

The National Conservative Union Committee.

GEORGE B. M'CLELLAN NOMINATED FOR PRESIDENT, JUDGE CAMPBELL FOR VICE-PRESIDENT.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, Dec. 24.

It is understood that the National Conservative Union Committee, now in session in this city, have reaffirmed the nomination of Major-Gen. GEORGE B. MCCLELLAN for President, and have nominated Ex-Gov. W. B. CAMPBELL, of Tennessee, for Vice-President.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, Dec. 24.

At the public meeting of the Conservatives at the Council Chamber to-night the attendance was not very large, owing perhaps to the shortness of notice and the outside attractions. Hon. AMOS KENDALL presided, and speeches were made by Messrs. STEVENS, of New-York; NORTON, of Texas, and others. The course of the Administration was denounced, and resolutions were adopted approving the nomination of MCCLELLAN and CAMPBELL, of Tennessee, and recommending the formation of McClellan Clubs throughout the country.

The Great Western Sanitary Fair.

CINCINNATI, Thursday, Dec. 24.

The Executive Committee of the great Western Sanitary Fair have resolved to issue, as soon as possible, a history of the Fair, embracing the names and residences of all the donors, with the amount of their contributions. The entire proceeds are to be given to the Fair. Business and other men are interested in making a good record.

From Arkansas.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Thursday, Dec. 23.

Col. WILLIAMS, commanding at Roseville, Ark., has secured for the Government, baled, and in process of ginning, some 200 bales of rebel cotton, and has within reach of camp 100,000 bushels of corn, and is gathering 1,000 bushels per day. He can put up, if salt can be procured, 200,000 pounds of pork. All of this is being done by the regiment, with the assistance of one extra train, besides running two mails, and hunting bushwhackers generally, several of whom have been captured.

The U. S. Steamer Lehigh.

BALTIMORE, Thursday, Dec. 24.

The report by the Star of the South about the Lehigh is erroneous. The American's correspondent, in a letter by the Arago, speaks of it. She merely got aground and sprung a leak, rendering it necessary for her to go to Port Royal for repairs. She was not injured by a rebel battery.

Official Commendation of Negro Soldiers.

HEADQUARTERS, SIXTEENTH ARMY CORPS,
MEMPHIS, Tenn., Dec. 17, 1863.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 173.—The recent affair at Moscow, Tennessee, has demonstrated the fact that colored troops properly disciplined and commanded, can and will fight well, and the General Commanding Oorps deems it to be due to the officers and men of the Second Regiment West Tennesssee Infantry of African Descent, thus publicly to return his personal thanks for their gallant and successful defence of the important position to which they had been assigned, and for the manner in which they have vindicated the wisdom of the Government in elevating the rank and file of these regiments to the position of freeuman and soldiers.

By order of Maj.-Gen. S. A. HURLBUT.
T. H. HARRIS, Asst. Adjt.-Gen.

But, there is one thing that ladies everywhere ought to do, and that is, to eulogize the name of Mme. DEMOREST; for she has just invented one of the most convenient articles for their use that has ever appeared. It is a dress elevator. Now, instead of allowing the dress to sweep the sidewalk, they can raise it up just enough to escape the dirt, and in no wise disfigure its beauty.—Willimantic Journal.

Chloasma, or Moth Patches.

Blemishes on the face, called Moth, are very annoying, particularly to ladies of light complexion, as the discolored spots on the skin show more strongly on blondes than on brunettes, but they contribute greatly in marring the beauty on either, and anything that will remove Moth Patches without injuring the skin in texture or color, would no doubt be considered a great achievement in medical science. Dr. B. C. PERRY, having devoted his whole time and attention to Diseases of the Skin, will guarantee to remove Moth Patches, Freckles, and other discolorations from the face without injury to either texture or color of the skin. AGAIN NEW TESTIMONY.
READ.
HARLEM, July 30, 1863.
I have been deaf for over TWENTY-FIVE YEARS, and Dr. VON EISENBERG operated on both of my ears without the slightest pain—a thing that I could not believe could be done. I now hear well, and feel as I never felt for the last twenty years. The dexterity and skill with which the operation was performed evince the highest practical ability. I hear perfectly. It is now over a month since the operation, and I continue to feel as well as ever.
WILLIAM LIDDLE,

TESTIMONIAL FROM ONE OF THE MOST RESPECTABLE CITIZENS OF NEW-YORK.
DEAFNESS AND CATARRH CURED.
No. 420 SIXTH-AV., NEW-YORK, Dec. 2, 1863.
I was deaf for several years, and hearing of the great cures performed by Dr. Von Eisenberg, I was induced to place myself under his care, and I am now happy to state that my hearing was entirely restored after a short treatment. I was also suffering from chronic catarrh, of which I was also cured by the skillful treatment of Dr. Von Eisenberg. I do but justice to the Doctor in stating that in treating me he displayed that skill and knowledge which have already procured for him such a deserved reputation, and that the principles which direct his system of curing Deafness and Catarrh are such as to render success certain, in my opinion. Many months have passed since Dr. Von Eisenberg restored my hearing, and it continues as good as ever.
O. HOPKINS.

CATARRH CURED.
NEW-YORK, Aug. 23, 1863.
I have been suffering for the last three years from a severe Catarrh, with a continual dullness in my head, a tightness across my chest, a weight over my eyes, which were weak, watery and very painful. My nostrils were continually obstructed with a pouring of fluid. I have had frequent sneezing, hoarseness of my voice, generally attended with spitting, often with a fullness of my throat, together with a soreness and a dropping. Dr. VON EISENBERG has cured me of all these disagreeable sufferings. I now feel a new life. The treatment of Dr. VON EISENBERG is as skillful as it is successful; it is impossible to overrate the benefit I have received at his hands. I heartily recommend any one suffering like myself to place themselves under Dr. VON EISENBERG'S care, with a certainty of being speedily cured. I give this with gratitude and pleasure. I cannot forbear again saying that my voice, which was hoarse and thick when I applied to Dr. VON EISENBERG, is now clear and good; indeed, I feel abundantly satisfied.
JAMES LITTLE,
No. 245 7th-st., New-York.

NEW-YORK, Sept. 9.
I have been suffering for years past from a severe Catarrh, with a great heaviness over my eyes, with a severe depression, great uneasiness, and pain in my head, great difficulty in breathing, and a continual accumulation in my nostrils, which gave me restless nights for several years. I have consulted several physicians, who pronounced me to be consumptive. What I suffered for so long a time is indescribable. My system was entirely disarranged and greatly debilitated. I not only felt weak, but I had a cloud continually before my eyes, and my ears were so affected that I was threatened with a total loss of hearing. I must say, I think, I was guided by Providence to come to Dr Von Eisenberg, who not only cured me of my Catarrh by removing an astonishing quantity of disagreeable matter from my head, but he restored me to erfect health, a blessing I have not enjoyed for many years. Now I enjoy a good night's rest, and pursue my business with comfort. I must acknowledge that Dr. Von Eisenberg's mild and scientific treatment for Catarrh deserves the highest commendation, as the principle which directs his system of curing Catarrh is such as to render success certain.
JAMES FURLONG, No. 556 2d-av.

No. 134 ALLEN-ST., NEW-YORK, Feb. 9, 1863.
I have been completely deaf in one ear, and partially so in the other, for above seventeen years, with a disagreeable discharge from both ears, combined with continual rumbling noise in the head, for which I have been treated by a most eminent practitioner in the City without the slightest relief.
I consulted Dr. Von Eisenberg, but I must candidly say that I had no faith in his success when I did so. It is, therefore, due to Dr. Von Eisenberg to acknowledge that I am entirely cured; also, that he displayed that skill and knowledge which have procured for him such an unrivaled reputation. As I have had an opportunity of comparing his mode of treatment with that of others, I can truly state that it is not only superior, but the principles which direct his mode of restoring the hearing are, in my opinion, certain. JOHN TAYLOR.

NEW-YORK, July 19, 1862.
This certifies that my mother has been for some time afflicted with partial deafness, suffering from pain, and rumbling noises in the head, together with other indications of a total loss of hearing. Dr. Von Eisenberg removed from her ears a great quantity of matter, together with coagulated blood, relieving her instantaneously, and all without pain. It is with grateful thanks that I give this testimony to his skill.
CARROLL J. POST, No. 28 South-st.

CHRONIC CATARRH CURED.
READ.
NEW-YORK, March 26, 1863.
"This is to certify, that I have suffered from very severe CHRONIC CATARRH, with a dull heaviness in the head. I felt my nose completely stopped up accompanied by continual soreness of the throat, the chills stealing over me with occasional hot flushes, a great tightness of the chest and pain, so much so, that every one thought it was consumption. Having heard of the great cures performed by Dr. Von Eisenberg, I consulted him with but little hope of a cure. I am now happy to be enabled to add my testimonial to the great number already in the Doctor's possession, as to his scientific and successful mode of treatment, as he has shown in my case that skill and knowledge which have procured for him so great a reputation. I am so entirely restored to perfect health that I do most sincerely recommend all sufferers from CHRONIC CATARRH and SORE THROAT to apply at once to Dr. Von Eisenberg with a certainty of being cured."

LETTER NO. I.
ON ELECTRICAL THERAPEUTICS.
BY DR. CHAMBERLIN, MEDICAL ELECTRICIAN,
NO. 50 BOND-ST., NEW-YORK.
At the present time thoughtful minds are turning their attention to the subject of Electricity science, and watching, with intense interest, the development of every phenomenon, from the discharge of the storm-cloud to the evolution of the electric spark. Electricity has formerly been looked upon as incomprehensible—eratic in all its operations, subject to no fixed laws, having no particular mission to perform, except cutting up occasional freaks for the amusement or terror of frail humanity.
BUT THANKS TO THE intelligence of the age, the mysteries that heretofore clustered around it, one by one, have disappeared, and its fixed laws are now definitely understood, and the benefits resulting from recent discoveries are incalculable.
The identification of the fluid of the storm-cloud with that evolved by the ingenuity of man, formed a new era in electrical science, and led to important results, and still greater results have been accomplished through the simple process of electro-telegraphing, which is so completely identified with all our various interests and relations, that a loss of it would overthrow the very fabric of human happiness, prosperity and progress.
MORE RECENT FACTS
have demonstrated that Electricity is the foundation of all sciences, and the cause of all causes, save the first great cause, which created it, and armed it with almost Omnipotent power.
THE OBJECT OF THE
following communications is more particularly to discuss the subject of MEDICAL ELECTRICITY,
and to show from facts the most incontrovertible, that this subtle agent is a reliable therapeutic, perfectly adapted to every form and condition of disease; and when applied according to the electrical requirements of the system, is capable of removing every malady that is at all curable.
AND WE INTEND
still further to show why it has proved so precarious in the hands of those who have ignorantly employed it, without reference to quantity or intensity, or a knowledge of the electrical polarities of the nervous system.
A FEW YEARS AGO
the medical faculty both of this country and Europe took great interest in the subject of Medical Electricity, and from time to time the most astonishing cures were reported in their journals, but, like other men, "doctors disagreed;" some believed it a universal curative agent, others discarded it, except in particular cases, while the majority looked upon it with suspicion.
IS ELECTRICITY A FAILURE?
At the present time the remark is quite general among medical men that Electricity, as a curative agent, has proved a failure; that its merits have been frequently tested, but as often condemned; but still they admit its controlling power over certain forms of disease, but from its frequent failures, and the evils oftentimes attending its administration, they generally discourage its use.
THIS FACT WE ARE WILLING to admit, to wit: that it has proved a failure, like many other important sciences, especially in the hands of the ignorant, and even the intelligent, where they have never devoted their time and talent to a proper investigation of the subject.
THE ADAPTATION OF STEAM
as a motive power first proved a failure, and had FULTON abandoned his long-cherished theory after a few unsuccessful attempts, its utility would have been condemned and instead of moving onward as we now do, at the rate of a mile per minute, we should still be restricted to the locomotive powers of the old coach and four.
ELECTRO-TELEGRAPHING, too, at first proved a failure, not for lack of efficacy in electricity to accomplish all that was anticipated, but for a want of knowledge in the adaptation of means to ends. Had MORSE abandoned his designs after a few fruitless experiments, the metallic network that now encircles the civilized globe, ramifying to every city, town and hamlet, bringing intelligence by the swift-winged messenger of lightning, would probably never have had an existence.
THESE FACTS BORNE IN MIND
must show to every intelligent observer that no reliable result can be obtained upon any subject by a few random experiments, and particularly one so intricate as Medical Electricity, which involves not only a knowledge of all the modifications of Electricity, but the effect of each current in various diseased conditions of the body. Ignorance upon this subject accounts for the disappointments and failures so general among operators, for how can we expect uniform results without adherence to fundamental principles?

PRIVATE DISEASES CURED IN THE shortest possible time, by Dr. WARD & CO., No. 50 Lispenard-st., near Broadway, without the use of Mercury, loss of time or change of diet. Dr. WARD, from the hospitals of London, Paris and Edinburgh, is the discoverer of the only certain and reliable remedies for diseases of a private character. In 25 years' practice he has cured more cases of Secret Diseases and Wrong Treatment than all others combined. I can and will cure you in less time and at less expense than any one can or will, and those who have been robbed of their money and health, call. It will take but little money and time to restore you. If you have been unfortunate, call at once. By his special experience in this much neglected branch of medical science, he is enabled to guarantee a cure in the most complicate cases. Recent cases of Gonorrhœa or Syphilis, cured in a few days, without change of diet or hindrance from business. Secondary Syphilis—the last vestige eradicated without the use of Mercury. Involuntary emissions stopped in short time. Sufferers from impotency, or loss of sexual power, restored to full vigor in a few weeks. Permanently and speedily cured by a new treatment. Persons at a distance failing to receive prompt treatment elsewhere, may get a permanent cure effected by writing a full diagnosis of their case, addressed to Dr. WARD, No. 50 Lispenard-st., the only place. Call, send for, or write for a circular.

THE CHESAPEAKE AFFAIR.

Cruise of the Ella and Anna—The Excitement at Halifax—Capt. Braine in the City.

From the Boston Traveller, Dec. 23.

The steamer Ella and Anna arrived up at the Navy-yard at 9 o'clock this morning, direct from Halifax. From her officers we have gathered the following account of her arduous pursuit of the Chesapeake, and the glorious success that culminated in the recapture of the new-fledged pirate craft. We commence at the beginning of the cruise.

The Ella and Anna left the Navy-yard on the 10th inst., in command of Volunteer Lieut.-Commanding John F. Nichols, with 75 officers and men on board. She had for an armament two 12-pound howitzers and two 24-pound howitzers.

On the 12th they arrived at Eastport, and took two pilots on board. Here they ascertained that the pirates were at Margaret's Bay, Nova Scotia, 25 miles from Halifax. They at once started for this place, but on arrival, they were prevented by heavy winds from entering.

Capt. Nichols then went into Halifax and coaled. Here he learned from the American Consul that the Chesapeake was in La Have River. He left Halifax at 11 o'clock at night on the 15th, arrived at La Have, and was informed that she had left the evening before for Lunenburgh.

At once got under way, and proceeded to that port, where Capt. Nichols learned that the Chesapeake was then in Mud Cove, Sambro's Harbor. Arrived off Mud Cove at 3 o'clock in the morning; at daybreak perceived the Chesapeake at anchor, and saw a boat leave for the shore.

The American flag was then run up on the Chesapeake with the Union down. They ran alongside her and found three men on board, two of whom had been prisoners on board. One was the First Engineer and the other the fireman.

The Chief Engineer said that he had received very harsh treatment. He was not allowed to leave the engine room, and a man stood beside him constantly with a revolver pointed at his head.

No arms were found on the Chesapeake, except two old six-pounders, used for firing salutes. When the Ella and Anna first saw the Chesapeake, a schooner was descried alongside supplying her with coal, which hauled off as soon as she saw the new comer.

Capt. Nichols sent a boat's crew on board of her, and found cosily stowed away one of the original pirates, whom one of the crew, formerly a member of the Boston police, recognized as a well known New-York thief who has been in our lock-up time and again, and who has passed several terms in Sing Sing in blissful ignorance of the world beyond.

Of the three men found aboard the Chesapeake, one was a pilot, who had arrived in company with an engineer, the night before from Halifax. He was "elevated" at the time of discovery, and, like Mr. Toodles, made several demonstrations toward the Paymaster's clerk, but they proved abortive and harmless. He said he was engaged to pilot the vessel to Nassau.

When the Ella and Anna espied the Chesapeake, the pirates were all in bed, and it was not until the look-out watch saw the steamer that they were aware that an enemy was hovering near them.

They at once took their boat and pushed for the shore, leaving on the cabin table a warm breakfast, ready to be partaken of. They had previously sold to the schooner five or six thousand dollars worth of the cargo, for one-sixth of the value, and the Chief-Engineer said they had goods stored ashore.

The next step of Capt. Nichols was to direct his course for Boston, and after provisioning his prize, and placing a crew on board, he took the Chesapeake in tow.

He soon spoke the gunboat Dacotah, and was ordered by Capt. Clary to carry the Chesapeake to Halifax, and leave his prisoners to the disposition of the British authorities.

He arrived at Halifax at 4 P. M. on Thursday, and on Saturday, at 3 P. M., delivered the Chesapeake up to the British Government. The wharf was crowded with people, as it it had been from the hour of their arrival. Ensign Coghlan took the prisoner captured from the schooner ashore, and was about to surrender him to the Provincial Marshal, when he jumped from the wharf into a boat in which were two men, who pulled off with him.

Like Major Bagstock, the Marshal became violently excited, (apparently,) and threatened to shoot, though whether the man of the moon our informants cannot positively affirm. However, the crowd said "nay," and he did not shoot, and neither the fugitive nor the moon were injured.

This was the last seen of the prisoner, though the officers have good reason for believing that all the pirates were prowling about Halifax when they arrived there. When the Ella and Anna entered the Halifax harbor with the Chesapeake in tow, the report was circulated that the order of things was reversed, and that the Yankee was the prisoner, "a consummation most devoutly to be wished," but happily not executed for their delectation.

The officers also believe that Capt. Braine, the chief of the pirates, visited the Ella and Anna while she was at Halifax, for a man was pointed out to them as him, who had been on board of their vessel.

Some of the officers who went on shore were accosted with salutations more energetic than polite, and with the appellation of "Yankee" were coupled epithets less entertaining. At other times again they were in no way molested.

At the instigation of some American citizens, Capt. Braine, the pirate commander, was arrested and held in custody three hours, but before they could obtain legal authority, he escaped.

It is generally believed that the British Government will deliver the Chesapeake up, as the citizens of Halifax and the Press seem to consider her seizure a piratical act.

The Ella and Anna sailed on Saturday for Boston. During her cruise she has experienced most inclement weather, and Commander Nichols is deserving of the highest credit for the ardor with which he sought in face of all obstacles to find the Chesapeake.

Every clue was followed with all possible dispatch, and his crew and subordinates speak in high terms of his courage and seamanship. It is reported that a higher position awaits him in consideration of his recent exploit, and no one will regret to learn that such is the case.

The following are the names of the officers who sailed on board the Chesapeake:

Volunteer Lieut.-Com.—John F. Nichols.
Acting Master and Executive Officer—Wm. McGloin.
Acting Ensign—E. K. Smith.
Ensigns—J. D. Clark and J. B. Coghlan.

THE PIRATES' ACCOUNT OF THE CAPTURE.

From the Halifax Citizen, Dec. 17.

Messrs. Editors: In the present excited state of the public mind regarding the recent capture of the steamer Chesapeake, a few simple facts may correct the erroneous statements circulated by interested parties to embitter the minds of those who have leaned in their sympathies to the Southern cause. The Chesapeake was captured by Southern officers under a legal commission issued by Southern authorities. The parties took the risk, by passing through the Federal States, of being captured, and would undoubtedly have been treated as spies. They procured their arms in New-York, and, as correctly stated, took passage on the steamer. They knew the strength of the crew—16 men. They had to risk the number of passengers on board assisting the crew, who were all armed with revolvers. The vessel carried two pieces of cannon. When the moment for capture had arrived, three of the party entered the engine-room, the engineer and two firemen being there. The order to surrender was answered by the engineer rapidly discharging his revolver and wounding one of the Southerns, who instantly fired in return, disabling the engineer. The party on deck demanded of the mate and Captain their instant surrender, and upon their resisting, fired a few shots, not so much with the view of injuring them as to induce them to submit quietly. After the capture, and at the request of the officers, that they would make no attempt at recapture, they were permitted to go about the vessel as they pleased, a guard being placed to prevent surprise.

On being landed, which was done to accommodate the passengers and crew, at St. John, they united in their expressions of gratitude for the handsome manner in which they had been treated. Their private property was all given to them, they selecting it themselves. Some who were without funds were supplied by the Southerners. The Captain took all the nautical instruments, as he said they were his own private property.

It was well known that this vessel would soon have all the Federal cruisers after her; that the act would be denounced by every Northern sympathizer, and the Government would be besieged with applications to prevent her from obtaining any supplies. The necessity for approaching the British Coast might have been avoided, but the passengers would [illegible] been carried a great distance out of their course [illegible] doing. The people of this Province have furnished the coaling and supplying Federal vessels [illegible] would be indeed hard if similar privileges were denied to this Confederate prize. She came on this coast under necessity, and there [illegible] but little justice in hunting her down by telegraph, keeping all the offices open, and the operators at their posts day and night, Sabbath as well as week days, that her whereabouts may be at once communicated to the Yankee gunboats; in fact, the whole Province made a police for the Federal government, with orders that the telegraph on the Sabbath should only be used for this purpose, and no message received or sent which might warn or befriend the prize steamer or her officers. The telegraph lines are owned by Americans; still this should give them no exclusive privilege over the people of this Province or the general public, and a message sent by a Confederate should be as sacred as if sent by a Federal. Your allusion to the Fenian Brotherhood has no parallel or comparison to this case; they are not a separate nation; they are not recognized by the world as belligerents.

Privateering has always been a cherished right with the Americans, and this affair is but just retribution on a small scale.

There is a mistake also as regards numbers. Thirteen was the number of Confederates, whilst the crew were 16, with six passengers. The crew were all armed with revolvers. They expressed on leaving the ship, gratitude for the manner in which they were treated after the capture. The above is from one who was present. INDEX.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

SEIZURE OF THE NEW-ORLEANS STEAMER.

Contraband Goods Found on Board.

A CORTLANDT-STREET HOUSE IMPLICATED.

Arrest of Suspected Parties.

Surveyor Andrews having received information that the steamer George Cromwell, which plies between here and New-Orleans, and which was to have sailed yesterday, was going to take out a quantity of contraband goods, detailed several officers in his department to watch her on Wednesday night. Late in the night the officers saw a cart loaded with barrels drive up to the wharf where the steamer lay, when the barrels were hoisted on board. Before they were put into the hold the officers made their appearance and ordered them to be put back on the wharf. On examination they were found to contain powder and percussion caps, surrounded with potatoes. Early yesterday morning, Surveyor Andrews and his Deputy, Mr. Thos. J. Brown, boarded the steamer and took possession of her. Soon afterward Marshal Murray, with several of his Deputies, visited the steamer in pursuit of some noted characters who were expected to sail on her at 9 A. M. Several of them subsequently came on board and were arrested by the Marshal. The carman who drove the barrels to the steamer had meantime been followed up, and from him it was ascertained that the contraband goods were packed at a well-known house in Cortlandt-street, and that several more barrels were in waiting there to be carted to the steamer, had not the first load been seized. Mr. Brown, by order of the Surveyor, seized the place in Cortlandt-street, and now holds possession of it. The officers of the steamer are also said to be implicated. The Government authorities are determined to break up the contraband trade with the rebels, which has been carried on to great extent in this City, and this is a good beginning. The persons arrested will have a hearing before a United States Commissioner on Saturday. The steamer belongs to the firm of H. B. Cromwell & Co.

CHRISTMAS.

The good old Christmas Holiday is again upon us, and, thanks to the clerk of the weather, its advent this year is seasonable. Old Boreas, with his icy breath, has come to time, and although he is somewhat boisterous this year, and kicks up rather too much dust, yet there is music in his wintry voice as he goes howling round the street corners and through the branches of the leafless trees. It may be a dismal song to the shivering outcast or to the indoor poor, who cannot buy coal at $10 a ton; but, thanks to Christian charity and to the land of plenty in which we live, these unfortunates make up the exception and not the rule. The great mass of the loyal liberty-loving Christian people of these Northern States, notwithstanding the costly war, are yet in a condition to enjoy the Christmas time, as of old, and amidst their enjoyment to aid the suffering around them, and commiserate the condition of our blinded enemies. Seldom, in this City, has the Christmas festival been ushered in with more gayety and exuberance of joy. From early morning, yesterday, until late into the night, all the business streets were thronged with people making preparations for the holiday. "Santa Claus" was never more liberal in his purchases, and never were stockings hung in the chimney-corner with a more confiding faith than last night. In all the Episcopal and Catholic churches, the festivities of Christmas Eve were celebrated on the grandest and most imposing scale. In the neighborhood of Grand-street and the Bowery, tin horns played their part, as usual, during the night, only more so. There was splendid skating during the day in the Central Park, and on all the ponds in and about the City, and everybody, young and old, enjoyed himself as best pleased his fancy.

The Commissioners of Charities and Correction made abundant provisions for celebrating Christmas in the different institutions under their charge, and many are the hearts that will be made glad to-day, through their kindly consideration. Besides these, the City's children, there are many poor boys and girls in our midst who will have to depend on individual charity for their Christmas dinner, and for such tokens of kindness as may remind them of the beautiful significance of this Christian Anniversary. No Santa Claus descends the chimneys of the poor, but there are thousands of Christian men and women in this City who daily enter the abodes of poverty on errands of love and charity, and never were their faces more welcome than they will be to-day.

The Death of Gen. Corcoran.

By advices from Fairfax Court-house, we have learned the causes of the death of Brig.-Gen. Corcoran. On the afternoon of the 22d inst., Gen. Meagher, who was paying a visit to Gen. Corcoran, was to return to Washington, when Gen. Corcoran, and some members of his Staff, concluded to accompany him. After leaving Gen. Meagher at the station, it was suggested to Gen. Corcoran to ride Gen. Meagher's horse, which he did. When near the headquarters of Gen. Corcoran, those who accompanied him held in their horses, while he rode on. In a short time his friends came to a small gully, near the General's headquarters, and found that the horse had fallen upon him, and that he lay there senseless. They immediately conveyed him to his headquarters, where he was bled by the doctors in attendance. He gave a sigh on being bled, but never spoke after the accident occurred.

On hearing of the death of Gen. Corcoran, the officers of the Sixty-ninth regiment held a meeting at French's Hotel, when it was agreed to attend the funeral in a body. The following are the orders issued by Col. Bagley.

Headquarters Sixty-Ninth Regiment, N. G. S. N. Y., Essex Market. New-York, Dec. 24, 1863.

General Ordes, No. —.—Having learned with profound regret of the death of Brig.-Gen. Michael Corcoran, and feeling that all the officers and men of this command share with me in deploring the melancholy event, and also that it will afford them a sad gratification to take part in the obsequies of one whose connection with this regiment was so distinguished and honorable, therefore the Sixty-ninth regiment, N. G. S. N. Y., is hereby ordered to assemble in full uniform, with overcoats, at the Regimental Armory, at 8 o'clock A. M., on the 27th inst., to attend the funeral of the late Brig.-Gen. Michael Corcoran.

Capt. Theodore Kelly, of Co. A, with his command, will meet the body on its arrival and escort it to the City Hall, and detail a sufficient guard to protect it.

The Field and Staff will report, dismounted, at the same time and place.

The Troop, Non-commissioned Staff, Band and Drum Corps will report to the Adjutant at the same place at 7½ o'clock A. M. By order of JAMES BAGLEY, Colonel Commanding.

Jno. McKeon, Adjutant.

Gen. Sandford will order a brigade to do the honors at the funeral.

The Fenian Brotherhood will make arrangements to attend the funeral in a body, as will also the various Irish Societies in the City.

The remains left Fairfax Court-house yesterday at noon, and will arrive in this City at 7 A. M., to-day, when Capt. Kelly's company of the Sixty-ninth regiment will meet and escort the remains to the City Hall.

Naval Movements.

DEPARTURE OF MEN-OF-WAR.

The United States steamer Honeysuckle left this port yesterday for the South Atlantic Squadron. The United States steamers Peterhoff, Kensington and Neptune left for their posts on the Narrows and Sandy Hook. The Metacomet and Proteus are ordered to go in commission, and depart as soon as possible. All these vessels are fully manned, notwithstanding the scarcity of sailors, and each has a proper complement of officers. Several other ships are preparing at the Navy-yard to go to sea, and will be ready next week.

ARRIVAL OF MEN-OF-WAR AT BOSTON.

The United States steamer Cornubia, Capt. Breck, arrived at this port to-day, from Halifax. The United States steamer Acacia sailed in company with this vessel for Boston, but was obliged to put back in consequence of her fires becoming clogged by using soft coal.

THE IRON CLAD RE D'ITALIA.

This vessel is now ready for sea, and will leave, it is thought, on Friday night, on a trial trip destined to test her merits as a sea-going vessel. Some gentlemen connected with the construction of her hull and engines, several officers of the Italian Navy and some members of the New-York press will go in her. She will probably be gone three or four days, during which time her engines will be worked to their full power.

NAVAL RETIRING BOARD.

The Naval Retiring Board is still in session at the Brooklyn Marine Barracks, and has just got through with the case of Commodore Porter. Yesterday it adjourned for the Christmas holidays, and will meet again when they are over. The list of the officers retired by this Board will be published in the Navy Register, to be issued next week from the Navy Department, and such names as are omitted will be published in this department next week.

The Mariners' Port Society.

An admirable musical and elocutionary entertainment was given on Wednesday evening, by the Sabbath School of the New-York Port Society's Mariners' Church, corner of Madison and Catharine streets. The church, which is not a small one, was thronged by an audience who were delighted and had reason to be, with the performances of the vast choir of youth, consisting of more than 200, under the direction of Mr. George W. Pettit, the leader of the music in the Church, and the Superintendent of the Sabbath School. A repetition of the Concert was called for, and is appointed at the same place, for next Wednesday, Dec. 30.

The New-York Port Society continues its industrial labors, by its Mariners' Church, Sunday Schools, reading-room, libraries, and other means, to promote the welfare of seamen and their families—as it has done for more than 40 years, being almost old enough to be a twin sister of the American Bible Society.

The circular and reports of the New-York Port Society show at once its great usefulness and its need of funds. It has a claim upon all our citizens, and might justly receive a Christmas and New-Year's donation from old and young.

The Sanitary Fair—A Warning.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I thank you for your mention of the Sanitary Fair in your paper of this day. Will you now have the goodness of warning all good people of New-York not to give anything to "ladies" or "gentlemen" who are already going about cheating the citizens by making collections in money or asking for articles to be sent to their address? The knowledge of this fact ought to be widely spread. The Executive Committee of the ladies, or the gentlemen's Committee, will publish in due time the proper places and persons to which donations may be sent or given. X.

Important Order as to Bounties.

Headquarters Department of the East, New-York, Dec. 24, 1863.

Circular.—Pursuant to instructions from the War Department, on and after the 5th day of January, 1864, no United States bounty other than the one hundred dollars authorized by the law of July 22d, 1861, promulgated in General Order No. 49 of that year, will be paid to any soldier [illegible]sting or reënlisting, veteran volunteer or otherwise. This order does not affect the bounties paid by States, cities or parties other than the United States.

By Command of Major-Gen. Dix.
D. T. Van Buren, Assistant-Adjutant-Gen.
Official:
Wilson Barstow, Capt. and A. D. C.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

Rumored Resignation of Public Officers.—The story published in one of yesterday's dailies, that Supervisor Blunt had resigned the position of Chairman of the Volunteering Committee, is untrue. Mr. Blunt has not resigned, but has threatened to do so, and it was upon this fact, doubtless, that the report of his resignation having some originated. The threat to resign grew out of the same misunderstanding with Supervisors Tweed and Purdy—two other members of the same Committee—in regard to negro enlistments. On Wednesday, these three gentlemen investigated some case concerning a negro recruit, the facts of which have not been made known, but in which Mr. Blunt's judgment was overruled by the other two gentlemen. The full Committee are to meet on Saturday, when the whole matter probably will be reviewed. Rumors were rife at the City Hall yesterday, that the Deputy Comptroller, Wm. E. Warren, Esq., had resigned that position for a much more lucrative position in commercial life. On inquiring of the Comptroller, Mr. Brennan, as to the truth of the reports, he said Mr. Warren had not resigned, and intimated that he would not do so until he (Mr. Brennan) should desire him to—a proceeding which, it was further intimated, was not the least likely to occur. The reports arose from the fact that Mr. Warren has been tendered the Presidency of the International Fire Insurance Company, a new organization, with the handsome capital of $1,000,000. Mr. Warren's withdrawal from the Comptroller's office would be a great loss to the public and to the Comptroller—a fact very generously and cheerfully admitted by Mr. Brennan himself. As a financier, accountant and statician, supported by indefatigable energy and unremitted industry, Mr. Warren has no superior. It was these qualifications that led to his appointment as Deputy Comptroller by the late Mr. Haws, and his retention in the position by Mr. Brennan.

Christmas Eve at Trinity Church.—The Christmas Holidays were inaugurated by the usual Christmas Eve celebration at Trinity Church yesterday afternoon. Ringing out with joyous peals of music from harmonious bells, with carols, songs and laughter of happy children, Old Trinity annually says to Wall-street, "Christmas is here; Venite Exultemus," and Wall-street closes its ledgers and cash-books and goes home, thinking of the empty stockings hanging by the chimney-side, and how if nature abhors a vacuum, young Wall-street abhors it too, especially in his Christmas stocking. At 2½ o'clock the Chimes commenced, Mr. James E. Ratliffe, ringing the following melodies on the Bells: No. 1—Fantasia, composed for Trinity Church Chimes, by George F. Bristow. No. 2—Christmas Carol, Silent Night, Holy Night. No. 3—Evening Bells. No. 4.—Christmas Carol. No. 5—Christmas Carol, The Christmas Tree. No. 6—Vesper Hymn. The services in the Church commenced at 3 o'clock, with the Psalms for the 24th day chanted by the choir as usual. At the close of the evening prayer, Mr. Cutler's carol, "The Christmas Tree," was sung by the children of the Sunday School, Master Hopkins taking the solo parts. The Rev. Morgan Dix, Rector of Trinity, then delivered a short address to the children, after which they marched in procession to the Christmas Tree, and each child received a beautiful and appropriate present. The Church was tastefully decorated with evergreens, laurrel, &c., and the Christmas Tree brilliantly illuminated and festooned with ribbons and gifts, attracted a great deal of attention. The Church was crowded to excess by members of the congregation and strangers. The church will be open this morning, services commencing at 11 o'clock.

Robbed of His Money.—Officer Rhodes, of the Twenty-seventh Precinct, arrested a woman named Lizzie Smith, at No. 126 Greenwich-street, at a late hour on Wednesday night. The arrest was made on the complaint of Robert Jordan, of No. 145 Washington-street, who alleges that Lizzie stole his wallet, containing $40, and, after abstracting the money, she returned the wallet to Mr. Jordan. The latter, in his complaint made before Justice Connolly, states that he saw the accused take the money from his pocket. Louis Wagner, the proprietor of the house in Greenwich-street, appeared at the Tombs yesterday, for the purpose of advocating Lizzie's cause, when, to his surprise, he was taken into custody, on the charge of keeping a disorderly house, and held for examination. Lizzie was committed for trial in default of $500 bail.

Five Points House of Industry.—The children at the Five Points House of Industry are to have their dinner and gifts to-day, as usual, from their old and tried friends. The church, who give the dinner, and the great tree loaded with a present for every one of the hundreds of children connected with the house, are only repeating a benevolence which they have shown for years. It costs something, but they do not think it too much for the happiness it affords to these representatives of the Babe of Bethlehem. The hour of dinner, &c., will be seen in the notice in our columns.

Services To-day.—This morning there will be services in nearly all the Episcopal Churches. At St. Bartholomew's, corner of Lafayette-place and Great Jones-street, the sermon will be preached by the Rector, Rev. Dr. Samuel Cooke. A grand musical service has been prepared by Dr. Clare W. Beames, the eminent vocal teacher, and organist of the Church.

Young Offenders.—John Wyer, aged 12 years, and another boy of about the same age, were taken into custody by Officer McCusker, of the Twenty-seventh Precinct, on the charge of stealing two barrels of flour and one barrel of kerosene oil from Gilbert Oakley, of No. 115 West-street. They were committed to the Tombs for examination.

Christian Alliance Sunday School.—The Christian Alliance Sunday School, Rev. Mr. Goss, will hold its annual festival at 10½ o'clock in Hope Chapel, Broadway. Addresses, singing of appropriate pieces and giving of presents will constitute the order of exercises.

The Passport System.—The United States Marshal and his deputies are enforcing in the most rigorous manner the new passport system. A large number of vessels have already returned from Sandy Hook to obtain such credentials as are now required before going to sea.

Christmas at the Navy-Yard.—It is the intention of the sailors at the Navy-yard to celebrate to-day with dinners on board of their respective vessels. The tars, judging from the preparations that have been made, will have "a merry Christmas."

"Turn Over a New Leaf."—At the beginning of a new year, is a good time to fix upon a course of life, which shall lead "onward and upward;" a date, on which to form new resolutions for personal improvement, and to decide on a permanent pursuit. But the question arises, "What can I do best?" Shall it be mercantile, mechanical, professional, or artistic? Who can decide this question, on which depends success or failure? We answer: You may consult the clergy, the lawyers, the physicians, each of whom will reply, We cannot tell; you must first try this, then that, and you may thus learn. But a competent Phrenologist will decide at once what is your natural sphere, and what you can do best. Examinations daily by Messrs. Fowler & Wells, No. 308 Broadway.

Mme. Demorest's Imperial Dress Elevator.—Every lady is delighted with them, and they have become indispensable. Godey's Lady's Book for January, says: "We have lately seen a very useful article invented and introduced by Mme. Demorest, No. 473 Broadway, New-York, called the Dress Elevator, and is so arranged that by it the skirt can be uniformly raised all round at a moment's notice. The Elevator is hooked around the waist inside the dress; cords come together, and are secured to buttons which pass through the dress; the buttons are drawn forward and tied or may be merely held by the hand. These Elevators are sold at only 50 cents each." and are mailed free on receipt of the price.

Burglar Alarm Telegraph.—The method of protecting the doors and windows of our residences from burglary by electricity, as suggested by Mr. E. Holmes, No. 252 Broadway, is worthy of a candid consideration. It has been in operation in our own houses for several months, and we have the fullest confidence in its usefulness and efficiency: Edward Dodge, (firm of Clark, Dodge & Co., Bankers,) No. 51 Wall-street; J. B. Trevor, (firm of Trevor & Colgate, Bankers,) No. 47 Wall-street; H. A. Tucker, (firm of Van Vleck & Tucker, Bankers,) No. 8 Broad-street; Gen. Philip S.
